THE ALCOHOLIC

A Social, Health Problem

By MARY LEYDECKER
(First of a three-part series)

The alcoholic, responsible for Marin's biggest social and health problems, is beginning to emerge into public view and even in some quarters has become a much sought after customer.

Interviews with representatives of various hospitals, groups and agencies who deal daily with Marin's heaviest drinkers brought these conclusions:

1. While drug abuse gets more public attention, alcoholism is a much more prevalent and severe problem in the county.

2. There is a hopeful trend in the emergence of new and more sophisticated treatment facilities for problem drinkers in addition to longtime "self-help" programs like Alcoholics Anonymous.

3. On the other hand, there is a kind of desperate competiton going on for the business of those alcoholics who want "the cure."

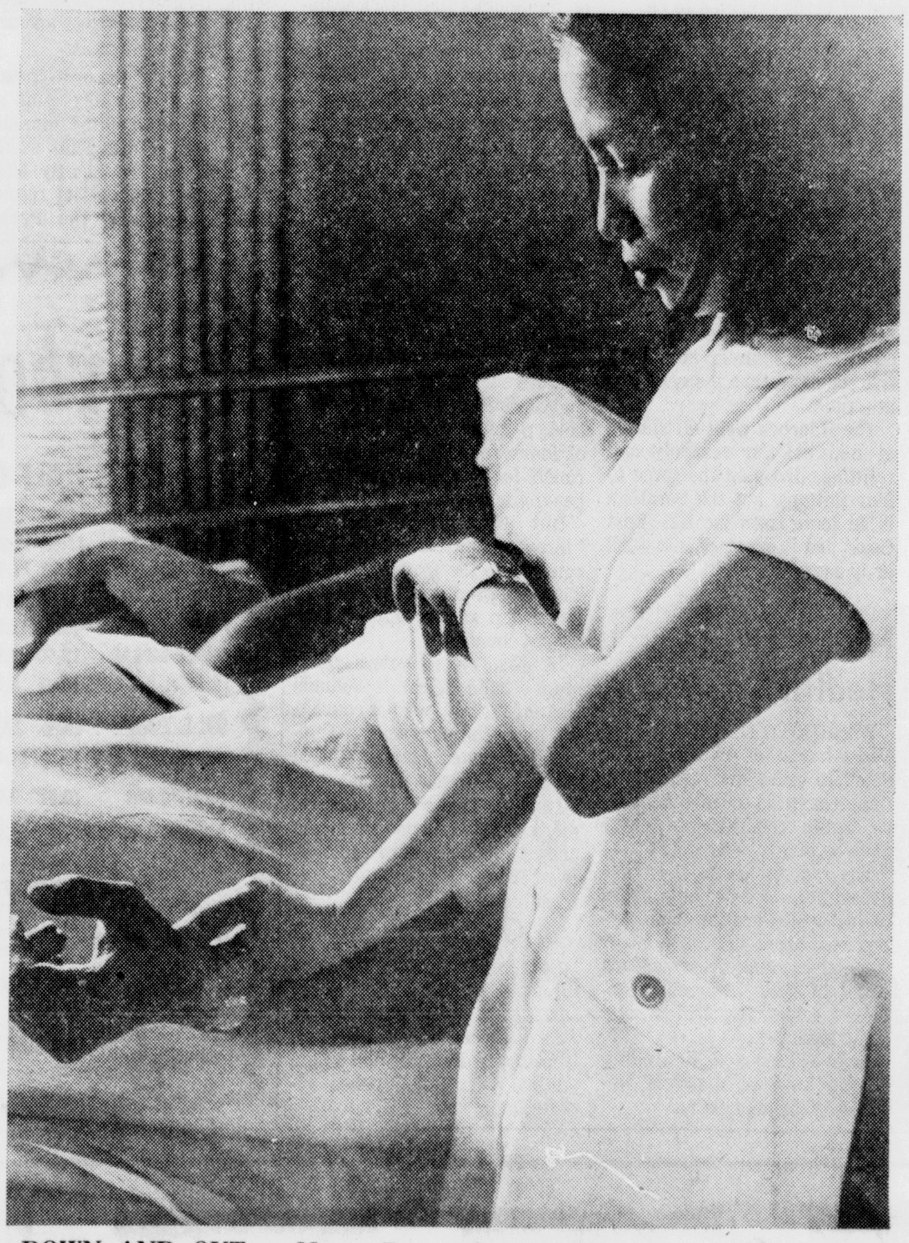
4. Alcohol is now the "drug of choice" for more high school students than other drugs.

5. Many graduates of the "drug culture" are turning to alcohol or, at least, combining its use with other drugs.

6. The Marin alcoholic is not a "monolithic" stereotype but ranges from the heavy drinking truck driver who frequents the bars to the professional man's wife who hides behind closed doors.

7. There is no general agreement on how to treat alcoholism but most people in the field favor "anything that works."

Lloyd Churgin, Marin County drug and alcohol abuse coordinator, said that rule-of-thumb estimates based on the incidence of cirrhosis (a common disease for heavy drinkers) indicates there are 9,000 alcoholics in Marin County.



DOWN AND OUT — Nurse Regina Delida checks the pulse of one of Marin County's thousands of alcoholics, who is lying in a hospital bed in what may turn out to be the first step for him on the long road to recovery. Alcoholism, the most prevalent social and health problem in Marin County, is now the target for an increasing variety of treatment facilities. (Independent-Journal photo by Jim Kean)

To this figure, he said, can be added unestimated numbers of other people who have problems because of alcohol abuse.

"Illness, highway deaths, family breakups — the effects are so pervasive," Churgin said. He added that there is "a lot of hypocricy" in dealing with alcohol abuse. Drugs seem "much more threatening" to most people and there is a longtime acceptance of alcohol abuse, he said.

"What does it matter what drug a person abuses — he's just as destroyed in the end," Chrugin, who came to Marin from the streets of New York, said.

Furthermore, Churgin said, there is a tendency to think of alcoholics as stereotypes, rather than as persons from all walks of life.

Churgin said the "public drunks" (skid-row types) have nothing in common with the "hidden housewives" or the "young male ego drinkers," except their use of alcohol.

Although many new facilities for treatment of alcoholism are springing up in the county, Churgin believes there is still a lack of planning for programs that will fit all segments of society, as well as a lack of coordination among present agencies.

He envisions eventually a screening service where an alcoholic can be steered toward whatever he seems to need.

"Some guys only need a clean shirt and tie and a place to stay for the weekend — others might need "social support" and a few need psychotherapy, he said.

In fact, among Marin's problem drinkers, only about 20 per cent are really addicted6to alcohol in the sense they will have withdrawal symptoms, according to Churgin.

Chrugin said that alcohol is replacing marijuana as "the drug of choice" for teen-agers who are experimenting with drugs, and reports from juvenile officers tend to bear this out.

Daniel A. Meyerson, director of the Marin Institute, which for seven years has been providing counseling and therapy to problem drinkers, said that the age level of persons seeking help at his agency is dropping.

"We are seeing more and more people in their 20s," he said. He theorized this was due, not to more drinking among this age group than in the past, but rather to an acceptance on the part of today's young adults of dealing with problems in a psychological way.

The biggest group which comes to the institute continues to be those in their 40's, however, he said. They are followed by persons in their 30's, and then those of retirement age.

"We are also seeing fewer people with 'DTs' because of better physical treatment," Meyerson said.

No one, however, predicts any kind of rosy future in which alcoholism will be longer be a problem in Marin because of increased treatment facilities and better education.

Churgin said, however, "We need to learn how to drink responsibly. If we need to drink to be sociable, it's not social drinking."

As to improved and better coordianted facilities for alcohol problems in Marin, Meyerson said, "If it can be done, we can get it done in Marin."

U.S. Jets Strike Bases Near Hanoi

Bombing Of Dikes Decried

SAIGON (UPI) — The U.S. command said U.S. Navy jets struck a military base and training camp 15 miles west of Hanoi today. Hanoi radio reported American planes were bombing irrigation dikes for the first time in the war in raids that could sharply curtail North Vietnam's food supplies.

The command said the Navy jets shot down three MIGs that rose to challenge today's bombers — the second time in three days that U.S. planes have bagged three MIGs in a single day.

Hanoi Radio broadcasts said two Navy jets were shot down near Hanoi today, bringing to seven the number of planes shot down in three days. The command denied this Hanoi report but had no comment on reports the previously spared Red River Delta dikes were being hit.

DELTA AREA

The command announced the raids within hours of Hanoi broadcasts which said the actual targets were dikes and agricultural areas in the Red River Delta in what Hanoi called the fifth consecutive day of major raids above the Demilitarized Zone (DMZ).

Pentagon spokesman Jerry W. Friedheim said "several tens" of combat aircraft were involved in today's strike near Hanoi and indicated the barracks hit involved one or both of the two training divisions headquartered near Hanoi.

"They train replacements and they have been supplying the invastion force not just with equipment but with men," Friedheim said.

Regarding Hanoi's charges that the dikes were hit, Friedheim said they were not on the target lists — "I haven't seen the word dikes in any of our reports."

REGULAR REPLY

He said it was always possible that SAM missiles fired at Navy aircraft flying over the dike area to or from their targets could have fallen onto the dikes. This is the regular Pentagon reply to Hanoi's charges that nonmilitary targets have been struck by U.S. aircraft.

A U.S. Command spokesman said, "tactical aircraft of the U.S. Navy today struck military targets approximately 15 miles west of Hanoi. There were no B52s involved in the strikes.

"The tactical aircraft hit military targets which included storage facilities, barracks and training facilities which are helping to support the Communist invasion across the DMZ...I can report that all U.S. aircraft

BOX ON FREEWAY CAUSES CRACKUP

This wrecked car (top photo) was struck from behind today by a truck after the driver of the car, Dolores E. Gorton, 44, of 45 Octavia Street, San Rafael slowed down to avoid hitting the cardboard carton shown (lower photo) on the trunk of a Califonria Highway Patrol car. Officers said the accident occurred about 9:25 a.m. on Highway 101 north of the Civic Center offramp. A pickup truck owned by R and L Pool Service of San Rafael first dropped the carton which caused following traffic either to slow down or detour around it. Then, a larger truck slammed into the rear of the Ford fracturing Mrs. Gorton's arm and causing extreme whiplash, according to officers who said she was treated by her own doctor. The truck was leased by Franzia Brothers Winery of San Francisco.

Mine Fire Flares Up; Hopes Dim

KELLOGG, Idaho (UPI)— Fire which killed 35 miners in the Sunshine silver mine and trapped 58 others a mile underground flared up intensely again today. Mine officials said it reduced the chances that some of the missing men could survive.

Rescue crews switched from the main rescue effort— attempts to lower a hoist down the No. 10 shaft where the men were trapped—to what had been the backup effort of dropping a 16-foot U.S. Bureau of Mines escape "capsule" down another shaft.

The intensified fire followed two other setbacks to the weary crews who have been trying for six days to get to the 5,000-foot level, where they hope the trapped miners have survived in a large fresh air pocket and on compressed air.

The other problems were a break in the main power line supplying the big hoist which rescuers hoped to use to descend to the bottom of the No. 10 shaft, and a sharp drop in compressed air pressure.

Haggard and hollow-eyed, Marvin C. Chase, general manager of the mine, told newsmen the new problems would set back the effort to lower the hoist, but the effort of dropping the "capsule" down the parallel No. 12 shaft probably could proceed on schedule at 1 p.m. PST.

Chase said men in the fresh air part of the No. 10 shaft probably could still survive.

But those in remote chambers and tunnels who have been surviving on air piped down to them may be in peril, he said.

The fire broke out last Tuesday at the 3,700-foot level of the huge mine. A total of 108 workers scrambed to safety. Rescuers working in thick smoke and poison carbon monixide found five bodies Tuesday, 19 Wednesday, eight Thursday and three Friday.

They had estimated 47 others were missing, but Sunday night added 11 others to the list.

A short in the mine's main 13,800-volt power line and a drop in pressure in a compressed air system blocked efforts today on two fronts to reach the trapped men, who could be alive a mile underground.

The electrical failure halted the main rescue effort shortly after crews scored a "real breakthrough" by clearing the No. 10 shaft of smoke. They were repairing a 36-man hoist for lowering from the 3,700 to 4,800 foot levels when the power shorted out.

There have been no indications whether the 58 missing men are dead.

G.M. Recalling 350,000 Vegas

DETROIT (UPI) — General Motors Corp. Monday announced recall of 350,000 1971 and 1972 Vegas-about half the total number produced—to fix a flaw that could cause the throttle to stick.

A spokesman for Chevrolet said there have been no accidents reported and only five cases of the throttle interference occurring "that we know about."

Chevrolet said the Vegas being recalled are equipped with single barrel carburetors to add a support to the carburetor idle stop solenoid bracket, a small electrical unit which controls the idle speed of a car.

Nixon War TV Talk Set After Emergency Session With Aides

BULLETIN

WASHINGTON (UPI) —President Nixon, after a three-hour emergency meeting with the National Security Council on Vietnam policy, scheduled a radio and television address to the nation for tonight to discuss the Communist offensive there.

Press Secretary Ronald L. Ziegler, who announced the 9 p.m. EDT speech, refused to discuss its contents or to say if it related directly to a three-hour meeting with top advisers earlier in the day.

"He obviously feels that he hos something important to say," Ziegler said of the President's address. But he said, "I can't provide any information" as to the speech's context".

Rumors spread through the Capital as Nixon met with his top war strategists. There was speculation he would order a possible new allied counter offensive, or even a blockade of Haiphong Harbor.

The situation became so tense that Senate Democrats unanimously voted to seek to have the President meet with Senate leaders to brief them on his thinking on how to meet the Communists' massive ground assault in South Vietnam.

It was Nixon's second nationally televised speech on Vietnam in 12 days. The President also discussed the Indochina fighting at length in a question and answer session a week ago at Treasury Secretary John B. Connally's Texas ranch.

Ziegler declined to say whether the President would discuss his scheduled trip to Moscow in his speech. But he said "we are proceeding with our planning" for the May 22 visit.

Ziegler said the speech was still being drafted, but it would probably run between 15 and 20 minutes.

In expectation that there might be some news about the National Security Council meeting, the White House press room was crowded when Ziegler appeared for the regular afternoon briefing.

"I have just one announcement to give you," Ziegler said. "The President has requested radio and television time at 9 p.m. tonight."

WORLD NEWS IN BRIEF

Plotters Give Up

MIAMI (UPI) — Two men surrendered to FBI agents last night on charges of attempting to obtain $250,000 by threatening to blow up part of the passenger terminal at Miami International Airport.

The men were identified as Leonard Kiser Holiday, 28, of Los Angeles, and Eric Franklin Yates, 20, of Richmond, Va.

The FBI said Holiday and Yates are charged with making a series of telephone calls to National Airlines early Sunday morning, threatening to set off explosives if they did not receive the money.

When FBI agents started fielding the calls, they patiently talked the suspects into giving themselves up.

Tito Expulsions

BELGRADE (UPI) — The Communist Party today heard a formal request to expel four of its former leaders blamed for Croatian nationalist outbursts last year, the official news agency Tanjug said.

The special meeting took place during a nationally televised speech in which President Tito said "there should be no compromise" in the struggle against factions and nationalist groups which seek to destroy the unity of Yugoslavia's federation of six republics.

A commission reporting on the conduct of the four former Croatian leaders formally requested their expulsion from the Communist Party at a Central Committee meeting.

Prisoners Riot

SAIGON (UPI) — A South Vietnamese military spokesman confirmed today a report that Communist prisoners of war had rioted on a prison island Saturday and said that 13 of the North Vietnamese POW's had been killed and 56 wounded.

Four South Vietnamese military policemen — two officers and two enlisted guards — were wounded during the five hours it took to quell the riot, the spokesman said.

He could not confirm reports that about 300 prisoners were involved and that they had seized weapons from their guards.

The riot occurred on Phu Quoc island 30 miles west of the Vietnamese coast in the Gulf of Siam.

Visit 'Encouraging'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Senate Democratic leader Mike Mansfield and Republican leader Hugh Scott returned from an "encouraging" 16-day visit to China, but said they would withhold specific comment until they brief President Nixon today or tomorrow.

In a joint statement after landing at Andrews Air Force Base yesterday, Mansfield and Scott said they hoped their visit along with that of Nixon would be the forerunner of more exchanges and better relations with China.

"I think it was a very meaningful and honest exchange of views," Scott said. "They have their system; we have ours."

"I was very much encouraged," said Mansfield.

Joint Police, Fire Department Display

The Corte Madera police and fire departments will hold an open house Saturday at the Public Safety Building for those interested in seeing the department.

Each department will have displays of the equipment its men use in performing their jobs.

Boy, 13, Wounded

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (UPI) — A sniper wounded a 13-year-old Protestant boy, and acid hurled by a 7-year-old boy scarred the face of a British soldier Sunday.

Violence swept the streets on either side of the railroad tracks separating Belfast's Roman Catholic Grosvenor Road and Protestant Sandy Row neighborhoods last night.

The fighting erupted when Catholic youths invaded the fringe of Sandy Row, a British army spokesman said. A Protestant crowd drove them back in a rock-and-bottle throwing clash.

Then, as the Protestants massed at a rail crossing, gunfire from Turin Street on the Catholic side wounded Alan Irwin, 13, the spokesman said.

Rare Heart Surgery

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (UPI) — Two-year-old Sandra la Fontsee, who underwent a heart operation probably rarer than a heart transplant, was to be released from the University of Michigan's Mott Children's Hospital this week.

The child, who suffered from "Taussig-Bing malformation" which occurs once in every one million births, underwent the five-hour operation April 21 to reverse the flow of blood within the chambers of her heart.

Before the operation, the Grand Rapids girl's color was a choking blue because oxygen-enriched blood was being pumped to her lungs instead of throughout her body due to a transposition of the two main arteries leading to her heart.

Hearing, Speech Center Benefit Set

A sherry and cheese-tasting party will be held May 19 from 7 to 9 p.m. at the Whistle Stop, 930 Tamalpais Avenue in San Rafael to benefit the Marin Hearing and Speech Center.

The event also will feature an auction of items donated by local merchants. The center, located at Marin General Hospital, offers diagnosis and rehabilitation of children and adults who have hearing impairments.

STRENGTH — U.S. troop strength in Vietnam now is 65,400, with President Nixon's goal of 49,000 expected to be met by June 30. (UPI Telephoto)

Viet GIs At 65,400 But Sea Forces Up

SAIGON (UPI)—U.S. manpower in Vietnam kept dropping on schedule today but combined U.S. military and naval strength in Thailand and aboard U.S. warships offshore was at its highest peak of the war.

Another 2,700 Americans left Vietnam last week, bringing the total down to 65,400, the lowest in nearly seven years. But the Thailand plus offshore total was 90,000 men.

The U.S. force in Thailand, mostly airmen, was close to the 5,000 record of four years ago and the 7th Fleet force totaled 41,000 men, far more than the 35,000 here in the late 1960's.

An estimated 5,000 of those naval personnel were Marines reported aboard the amphibious helicopter ships Tripoli and Okinawa and the smaller Denver, an amphibious landing craft transport.

The Marines are organized into three landing battalions which can be summoned to help protect the withdrawal of American personnel if they are threatened in the current Communist offensive.

Navy strength briefly soared to 44,000 last week when the carrier Hancock with its crew of 3,000 remained on station after the arrival of the Midway, bringing the carrier force to five. In the late 1960s the carrier force never numbered five for more than a day or two at a time.

The Hancock went off station at midweek for resupply and refitting, dropping the force to four flattops, but the Saratoga is en route from the U.S. East Coast and is expected in a week or 10 days.

Nader Urges Health Reports

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Ralph Nader has asked a U.S. District Court to order the Agriculture Department to release reports on health conditions at meat packing plants in six states.

The reports are used by the department to determine if the plants, which are intrastate operations, are governed by state inspection standards which are equal to federal standards required under the 1967 Wholesome Meat Act.

The states are Kentucky, Massachusetts, Missouri, Nebraska, Ohio and Texas.

LBJ Texas Machine Is Wrecked

DALLAS (UPI)—Aroused by a scandal-ridden state government, Texas voters Saturday all but wiped clean the slate of top incumbents, ending 20 years of rule under the Texas political empire of Lyndon B. Johnson and John B. Connally.

The man that former President Johnson and Treasury Secretary Connally favored for governor, Ben Barnes, was soundly defeated in the Ddemocratic primary.

Voters also nominated State Sen. Barbara Jordan of Houston to the U.S. House, and if she defeats token Republican opposition in November, she will be the South's first black woman in Congress.

Barnes, who became the youngest man in Texas history to be elected lieutenant governor four years ago when he was 30 and the heir apparent to the Johnson-Connally machine, received only 17 per cent of the vote.

Gov. Preston Smith, who banked $62,500 in a questionable stock deal while in office, did even worse —getting only 9 per cent.

Two reform candidates, millionaire rancher Dolph Briscoe and State Rep. Frances Farenthold, a lawyer and the mother of four, wound up in a June 3 runoff for governor. Briscoe is heavily favored.

But the effects of the "throw'em-out" trend were not confined to the governor's race. They rippled throughout the ticket and across most of Texas' 254 counties.

In East Texas, voters delivered a solid defeat to Johnnie Deanna Dowdy, wife of convicted Rep. John Dowdy, D-Tex., and nominated instead liberal state Sen. Charles Wilson.

In the Texas Legislature, more than 65 House members and 13 senators were removed from office.

Guitar Taken

Someone threw a rock through the front window of the Doug Karr Music Shop at 1543 Fourth Street, San Rafael, early Saturday morning and took a guitar, San Rafael police reported.

Nixon Denounced By POW League

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Last September, members of the National League of Families of American Prisoners and Missing in Southeast Asia stood and cheered wildly when President Nixon told them he never would abandon America's prisoners of war.

Sunday, seven months later, members of the same organization formally denounced the keystone of the President's Vietnam policy, called for the immediate adoption of a policy that would guarantee a return of the POWs and an accounting of the missing, and demanded that within 10 days Nixon sit down, face-to-face, with three of their representatives and answer their questions.

The action of the once-friendly league presumably came as a surprise both to the administration and to dissidents within the organization. Shortly after the league adopted its resolution condemning the President's Vietnamization program, about 50 activists went ahead with previous plans to deliver a letter to Nixon demanding a face-to-face meeting.

In its first direct, publicized slap at the administration, the league expressed "its extreme distress at the failure of this administration's policy to resolve the MIA-POW issue."

"The National League of Families expects the government to immediately adopt a policy which will insure an accounting of the missing men and the release of the prisoners of war, not just the withdrawal of combat troops," it said.

The league's weekend action, stemming from a specially called meeting, could have an impact on Congress. Lawmakers, especially hawks, enthusiastically have joined in expressions of support for the relatives of the country's approximately 400 POWs and 1,300 MIAs.

RETIRING AT KENTFIELD

Kindergarten Teacher's Recipe: Social Skills

By DICK SMULLEN

"Kindergarten should be a public relations job," said retiring Kentfield kindergarten teacher Honor Brown, "because this is the beginning of the 13-year span of teachers, children and parents relating through schools."

That's the lesson Mrs. Brown, 64, leaves with her successors and with parents as she prepares to leave the teaching profession after long decades.

In 17 years as a kindergarten teacher, Mrs. Brown has combined the practical and creative sides of her life with the imaginative world of her 5-year-old students.

Kindergarten to Mrs. Brown, who teaches at Adaline E. Kent School, isn't just a matter of subjects, "not a lot of sterile reading," as she put it the other day. But rather it's a "question of living together socially, teaching kids to be ready for the future."

The best way to do this, she said, is to give them a wide variety of experiences, such as field trips, exposure to art, music and other creative activities.

The walls of her room are hung with enameled ceramic discs, tie-died pieces of cloth and paintings, all done by the students. "Kids are better if you just give them the materials, show them how to do it and get out of the way," she said.

Pointing out science projects, art objects, story books and cooking recipes in the room, Mrs. Brown said, "We teach everything."

Cooking, she said, "teaches language development, math, sociability, good nutrition and health and it's a real fun thing to do."

HONOR BROWN
Not just subjects

One thing she doesn't believe in teaching her little charges is reading, to the horror of many parents. She feels the social skills are more important, and is now testing a pilot project in self-awareness for the children.

Her involvement with young children and teaching dates back 41 years, starting in 1929. She took out 16 years to raise a family.

She was born in Douglas, Ariz., where her father managed a copper smelting plant on the Mexican border.

During the short recession after the end of World War I, the bottom fell out of the copper business, and her father moved the family to Long Beach, where he found work. Mrs. Brown went to high school there and then to the University of California at Los Angeles.

Following graduation from the university in 1929, she taught for two years, during which she met her future husband, Judd. When they married in 1931, she had to give up her job because at that time no married teachers were hired.

Her husband worked in Northern California, and the couple moved to Humboldt. She earned a teacher's certificate at Humboldt State College and spent between 1947 and 1955 as a college professor.

Seventeen years ago the couple moved to San Anselmo, where they have been since. Her husband, now retired, was then in the contracting business.

Mrs. Brown began her kindergarten career in Kentfield in 1955. She teaches kindergarten because she sees it as the "most effective place to teach."

"What happens to a kid in the first four or five years of his life determines what he is for the rest of his life," she said.

A lively, energetic woman, Mrs. Brown has an active retirement planned, although she says "I may return to work with smaller children."

"When my husband and I moved to the Bay Area we decided there were a million things to do, and we were going to do them all. Naturally we only got around to about a third of them, so there's a lot left."

She talked about going to the theater, the opera, getting outdoors and exploring ("just driving down little roads to find out where they go"), and visiting new buildings with her husband, who has studied architecture.

Price Panel Hits 374 Big Firms

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The Price Commission today formally charged 374 of the nation's largest companies with failure to file quarterly profit reports as required by federal law.

The firms were among more than half the 2,954 companies with revenues exceeding $50 million which failed to report profit reports by the May 1 deadline.

Commission Chairman C. Jackson Grayson Jr. said the Justice Department would be asked to prosecute if the information was not submitted within five days. He said an even longer list of alleged violators would be released later this week.

They Didn't Mind Having To Wait

SANTA CRUZ, Calif. (UPI)—Most of the riders on the broken overhead gondola amusement ride took one look at the fire department's aerial ladder and decided to stay where they were.

Loud Party Ends With 4 Arrests

A loud party in San Rafael Saturday night ended with a fight between several men and police and the arrest of four of the men for a variety of offenses, police reported.

Booked into Marin County Jail on suspicion of assaulting an officer and resisting arrest were: Michael Edward Jenkins, 21, of 300 Olema Street, Fairfax, John Michael Gilbert, 19, of 20 Martling Road, San Anselmo, Ralph Edward Wescott, 20, of 16 Napa Street, Fairfax and Paul Joseph Olbrawtz, 19, of 1355 Lincoln Avenue, San Rafael.

All except Gilbert were also booked on suspicion of disturbing the peace. Bail for Jenkins and Gilbert was set at $2,500, and for Wescott and Olbrawtz at $5,000. All were held to appear today in Marin Municipal Court.

Police reported they were called to a noisy party about 11:30 p.m. at 423 First Street. Officers Ward Hayter and Theodore Lindquist responded. At first they were successful in quieting a large group of people outside. Then one man got into an argument with officer Hayter, pushing him around. Others joined in.

The police called for all available help and 12 San Rafael patrol units, as well as three from the sheriff's department and two from San Anselmo, responded. The party was quieted with the arrest of the four men, according to police.

Hearing Set On Annexation

The Fairfax City Council will hold a public hearing on proposed annexation of 165 acres northwest of the city when the council meets at 8 p.m. today at the women's club.

Applicant and owner of the property located beyond Oak Manor Drive along Sir Francis Drake Boulevard is Robert D. Marshall Jr., according to city clerk Eileen L. Foster.

The council also will hear a presentation by the county planning department on the preliminary countywide master plan. The county will seek council suggestions on how the plan could best be implemented, Mrs. Foster said.

Hub Council To Fill Agencies

The San Anselmo City Council hopes to fill several vacant seats on city agencies when it meets at 8 p.m. tomorrow at city hall.

City Clerk Helen Ragan said several vacancies exist on the citizens advisory committee on the housing element. Other openings are with the civil service board of review and the position of city council liaison to the county human rights commission, she said.

A public hearing on whether a restaurant should be allowed to be built at 137 Tunstead Avenue also is scheduled, Mrs. Ragan said.

Test Results To Be Presented returned safely from the strikes. No further details are available."

"At the same time," the spokesman said, "other U.S. aircraft and naval gunfire support strikes were attacking military targets south of the DMZ, in the DMZ and north of the DMZ"—a reference to strikes against the North Vietnamese panhandle and captured Quan Tri Province in the south.

At almost the same moment the spokesmen were reading their statement to newsmen, Hanoi radio reported North Vietnam shot down two U.S. jets today, one 22 miles northwest of the capital near Ha Tay, and the other over Ninh Binh, 60 miles south of Hanoi in the Red River Delta. It did not say what kind of planes were involved or what happened to the pilots.

The only two North Vietnamese military facilities that show on maps available in Saigon are Son Tay, 15 miles west of Saigon where U.S. Green Berets tried unsuccessfully to rescue American war prisoners in a helicopter raid in November, 1970, and Hoa Binh, long used as guerrilla training facilities for Laotians and Thais, according to U.S. intelligence sources.

The raids were the closest to Hanoi since April 16 when U.S. bombers struck at Haiphong and at the outskirts of Hanoi itself.

The irrigation dikes were never targets even at height of the American bombing of North Vietnam ordere by former President Lyndon B. Johnson in 1965-68. The dikes had been on the Air Force's proposed target list, but were spared.

According to documents in the Pentagon Papers, attacks on the dikes were ruled out then because of possible charges the United States was engaging in inhumanitarian attacks on civilian rather than military targets.

North Vietnam, with a population now estimated at 21 million, must import food but 80 per cent of what it does raise is in the Red River Delta below Hanoi where 65 per cent of the population of North Vietnam lives.

Trial Set For 5 In Hash Case

I-J Special Report

SAN FRANCISCO — A jury trial for five Marin County defendants arrested in connection with an alleged plot to import hashish through the U. S. mail has been set for Aug. 28.

The five, Scott Thomas Murphey, Wendy Noon McGill, Kyrmy Gardner Simonds, Trent Alan Ervin and Harry Henry Tistle, are accused of unlawful importation of and conspiracy to import hashish, and unlawful possession with intent to distribute hashish.

Miss McGill, Simonds, Ervin and Tistle also are charged with unlawful use of communications facilities to commit a felony.

They were arrested last December after customs agents in New York said they found an estimated $20,000 worth of the drug hidden in the soles of slippers mailed to them from Kabul, Afghanistan.

Five other persons, from Chicago, Afghanistan and San Mateo County were also arrested in connection with the case.

Asst. Supt. Joseph B. Goff said last year's $5,188,000 budget was supported by a tax rate of $4.79 per $100 assessed valuation. He said next year's estimated $5,350,000 may require a 20-cent tax rate hike, to $4.99.

Gray Aims To Be Head Of FBI Permanently

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Acting FBI Director L. Patrick Gray III says he aims to do such a good job in his new post that he will be President Nixon's No. 1 choice to permanently head the crime fighting agency after the November election.

In the meantime, the former submarine commander has moved in at full speed in his effort to take on leadership of the 20,000-employe bureau. He called the 59 special agents in charge of the nation's FBI offices to Washington for a meeting this week, along with a promise that he would visit each of their offices later.

He also hopes to quiz the top 15 associate and assistant directors to find out all he can about their responsibilities.

In an interview, Gray said he hopes to do such a "top notch" job that he may turn out to be the President's "leading candidate' to permanently replace J. Edgar Hoover, who died last week of a heart attack.

Gray also said he will remain more open to the press than Hoover did, and added that all government employes should retire at age 70 except in the "most unusual circumstances." Hoover was 77 when he died, and the target of criticism for the power he built up in 48 years on the job.

Gray said one matter into which he has already inquired was whether there existed secret files on politicians. He said he was told there were none, but added that information was still "subject to verification."

Gray also indicated he would run a team operation, delegating heavy responsibilities to several key aides, as opposed to the one-man rule exerted by Hoover.

Window Broken

Someone broke a glass door and stained glass window, valued at $180, at the Faith Lutheran Church at 355 Las Ranchitos Road, San Rafael, sometime between Saturday night and 8 a.m. yesterday, Rev. Bliss Bellinger reported to San Rafael police.

Israel Signals Arabs On War Capability

By FRANCIS OFNER
The Christian Science Monitor News Service

TEL AVIV — Israeli defense leaders are signaling Arab statesmen that if they carry out their threats of war, Israel is determined to carry such a war into Arab territory much deeper than it did in 1967.

They injicated that this time not only could the neighboring countries be reached, but more distant ones such as Libya and Iraq, should they become involved in military operations against Israel.

Even the strategic straits of Bab El Mandeb controlling access to the Red Sea from the south could be neutralized should the Arabs try to cut Israel's lifeline to the Indian Ocean by seizing this sensitive spot.

All this emerged from an operational demonstration of three powerful new Israeli weapons shown to the press April 11.

At the same time, the officers showing their new armaments voiced the hope that "their vastly increased firepower would act as a deterrent to war altogether and would spare us a test of their efficiency in actual battle."

Not that they are worried about such a test, one of the officers said. The new weapons — all American-made — are the Hercules C-130 Turboprop multi-purpose aircraft, the M-60 battle tank and the M-107 self-propelled gun.

"All these weapons guarantee greater mobility and firepower and a longer range for our operations," Col. Joseph Calev, spokesman of the Israel defense forces, said.

The four-engined Hercules plane is, like its mythological forebear, huge and bursting with power. It is manufactured by Lockheed in several models described in aviation handbooks as "equipped with special electronic gear."

The Hercules is capable of carrying 92 infantrymen or 64 paratroopers with full equipment or 74 stretcher cases. If used as a cargo plane, it can take a load of 20-½ tons of war material.

The Hercules, also, is the first Israeli transport aircraft with air conditioning, a feature particularly welcomed by military correspondents traveling to the demonstration site through the scorching heat of the Sinai Desert.

After we got off the plane, the crew showed the aircraft's maneuverability: its short 700-yard take-off and landing distance, the way it backs up and turns on its own axis on the ground.

Its flying range with maximum loads is 2,400 nautical miles which, it was pointed out, would enable it easily to reach enemy forces seeking shelter in hitherto inaccessible Libya or Iraq, should their rulers launch war.

The Hercules is described as particularly suited for tactical use in conjunction with the Israeli Air Force's Phantoms and Skyhawks. The latter two are fitted for mid-air refueling by Stratocruisers, thus extending their range to reach all parts of the Arab world.

The other important new weapon in the Israeli arsenal is the M-60 battle tank. It is an improved progeny of the Patton family, equipped with infrared sighting instruments for the commander and the gunner.

Its machineguns of various types are said to be superior to those of any other tank held by the Israelis. The M-107 self-propelled gun can fire a 67-kilogram shell at a rate of one per minute over a distance of 20 miles. It would thus enable the Israelis to withdraw some 12-½ miles from the Suez Canal — should an interim agreement be reached — without foregoing their defensive capacity.

As a curiosity, the Israelis also showed the operation of the Czech-made 80-mile rocket launchers captured in the six-day war in such quantities that they can be used as standard equipment in the event fighting breaks out.

A look at the number and types of these weapons shows that if the Middle East were to burst into a warlike conflagration, it would, quite apart from bringing misery and distress on its peoples, become a formidable proving ground for American versus Soviet armaments — probably on even a more sophisticated level than in Vietnam.

Church Liturgy Will Be Topic Of Institute

Dominican College of San Rafael will conduct "Arts in Adoration," an institute "exploring Christ in symbol, season and heritage," June 26 to July 21.

The four-week institute will introduce "participants to the riches of Catholic liturgy in a blend of music, art, theology, liturgy and scripture," the college announced.

Preregistration for the institute can be made by notifying the director of the summer session at the college. The schedule will be Mondays through Fridays from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Subdivisions To Be Discussed

Tentative maps for subdivisions should be reviewed by the recreation commission, the Rohnert Park Planning Commission has agreed.

In a joint meeting Thursday, planning commissioners said tentative maps for subdivisions should be referred to the recreation commission for review in terms of park sites and open space.

Recreation Director James Pekkain said the commission will make its recommendation directly to the recreation commission.

The commissioners also agreed to work together for bicycle trails and possible parks in updating the general plan.

CENTURY MARK — Dominique and Anna Marquis, married nearly 75 years, look over congratulatory cards marking his 100th birthday. They are residents of the Nazareth House in San Rafael.

(Independent-Journal photo)

Second Century Starts, But He's Counting From Beginning Again

By JAY GOODWIN

"Now I'm four days old," quipped Dominique Marquis, after celebrating his 100th birthday in San Rafael. "After 100 years, I start counting from the beginning again."

Joined by his 96-year-old wife, Anna, three children, five grandchildren, four great grandchildren, nine nieces and nephews, one brother, assorted friends and a crowd of well-wishers, Marquis closed out one century and began another at a birthday party last week at the Nazareth House retirement home.

His bones, he says, are stiff and his hearing is not too good, but for a man his age, Marquis is in remarkably good shape. A smile broke across his face as he sat in the Nazareth House, where he and his wife have lived for 10 years, and reflected on his past century.

Born in a small farming village in the French Pyrenees, Marquis attended school until he was 9 years old, when he quit to work in the cow fields, guard the herds, and work on the soil.

At the age of 19, with the French Army breathing down his neck, he decided to leave the country before he was drafted.

"I'm not a deserter, though," he explained. "I left France six months before the army would take me, with all my immigration papers in order."

He landed in New York and headed immediately for San Francisco, where his brother and two sisters were already living.

San Francisco, he recalled, looked like a bum town when he first arrived in 1892. "There were no sidewalks and holes all over the place. It was very dirty — like France."

He worked in a hotel — "I had to make 87 beds a day" — and a restaurant before landing a job as a janitor at French Hospital.

It was there that he met his wife of 74 years. "I was cleaning the floors and I saw this lovely girl," he said, with the remnants of a twinkle in his eye.

"I asked the nurse, 'Who is that girl?' She told me and two or three years later we were married."

In those days, the young couple would picnic all over the Bay Area and vacation in Sonoma County. It was during one of those vacations in Sonoma that the San Francisco earthquake of 1906 leveled their home.

"It was terrible. What could I do? Everything was down, there were no more houses. We couldn't even visit the place where we lived."

He packed his few remaining possessions and moved his wife and children across the bay to Oakland.

There for 50 years, he worked in a poultry firm, while she operated a neighborhood grocery store.

"Sometimes I worked from five in the morning to twelve at night," he recalled. "But after we got the union, the boss had to agree. We worked less and got paid overtime."

As far as Marquis is concerned, working conditions are not the only thing that has improved in this country since he arrived 80 years ago.

"Everything's better these days. TV is good. Telephones are good. Even telegraph is good," he declared with enthusiasm.

The only major leap in technology that has not caught his fancy is the space program.

"Landing on the moon is crazy. What are you going to do with the moon, anyway? The moon is there to light up the world at night. We aren't going to take it down, are we?"

The Marquises have a daughter, Marguerite Lazzeroni of Sunnyvale, and two sons, Marcel of Alameda and George of Redwood City.

Though his legs are tiring and his eyesight is not what it used to be, he is looking forward to his 75th wedding anniversary in January.

UROC 'Shot In Arm' For Ashbrook

SAN JOSE (UPI)—Congressman John Ashbrook's uphill primary election battle against President Nixon has recieved what the Ohio lawmaker termed a "shot in the arm" in the chief executive's home state.

The United Republicans of California (UROC) overwhelmingly endorsed Ashbrook's presidential candidacy on a 519-60 vote Sunday at the volunteer group's weekend convention here, attended by 1,000 persons.

Ashbrook made a personal appeal to UROC for its support in a Saturday night speech. He turned vice President Spiro Agnew's rhetoric on the Nixon administration, declaring that it had its share of "effete, intellectual snobs."

"And if you wonder who I am talking about, I am talking about people like Henry Kissinger," Ashbrook said. Kissinger is the President's chief foreign policy advisor.

The remark earned Ashbrook the heaviest standing applause of the evening. His speech was interrupted 26 times by ovations.

Criticizing Nixon for following Democratic policies and reneging on 1968 campaign promises, Ashbrook said the President's attitude towards North Vietnam was, "negotiate in good faith or we'll withdraw anyway."

Lyn Nofziger, executive director of Nixon's California reelection campaign, minimized the importance of the support of Ashbrook by UROC, which claims a membership of 10,000. Nofziger, who worked quietly here to block the endorsement, said UROC had no more than 4,000 members at the most.

The President has already been endorsed by the rival California Republican Assembly, which says it has a membership of 12,000 and is less conservative than UROC.

At a news conference Ashbrook also disclosed for the first time he would not support Nixon if he wins the GOP nomination. But the congressman stopped short of saying he would not vote for Nixon in the general election in November.

Ashbrook said that between no and the June 6 primary election he planned to spend his weekends campaigning in California.

He declared his goal was 50 per cent of the primary vote, but anything above 25 per cent would cause Republican leaders to reassess Nixon's candidacy.

A public opinion poll taken in February in California showed Ashbrook would receive six per cent of the primary vote, an aide to the congressman said.

Ashbrook's endorsement by UROC was presaged by the election Saturday of Paul Magnani of the Ventura County community of Oak View, an Ashbrook supporter as new state chairman. He defeated, 438-178, John Ryan of Torrance, who took no position on the presidential endorsement.

Magnani replaces outgoing state chairman Walter Hintzen of Santa Barbara.

The group also adopted resolutions ranging from urging the legislature to repeal a law naming a Los Angeles freeway after Nixon to opposing amnesty for American deserters from the Armed Forces.

UROC additionally went on record as supporting initiative efforts to restore the death penalty in California, opposing gun control laws, use of vote counting machines, the UN genocide treaty and the return by the United States to Hungary of the royal crown of St. Stepehen.

Other officers elected were Gerald Knudson of San Gabriel, southern vice chairman; William Hahn of Los Altos, northern vice chairman; Harry Wiens of Santa Cruz, central vice chairman; Dick Matteis of Willets, sergeant at arms; and Matteis' wife, Phyllis, secretary.

1972-73 Symphony Season Is Announced

I-J Special Report

SAN FRANCISCO — Thirty-three guest artists — from violinist Yehudi Menuhin in his local conducting debut to soprano Leontyne Price — will appear with the San Francisco Symphony during its 1972-73 season, it was announced today.

The season, to be cut short by the orchestra's first European tour in May, will begin Nov. 29 at the Opera House. It again will include a four-concert series at the Marin Veterans Memorial Building.

The orchestra's 61st season will conclude the second week of May, 1973, two subscription weeks shorter than the current season to accommodate the symphony's first European tour in mid-May.

Seiji Ozawa will be on the San Francisco podium for 12 out of the 22 weeks, and eight guest conductors will complete the season's 10-subscription weeks.

A season highlight will be the debut of Menuhin, who also will perform as a soloist on his January program.

Other regular series guest conductors will be Aldo Ceccato, Rafael Fruhbeck de Burgos, Hans Schmidt-Isserstedt, Istvan Kertesz, James Levine, Kazuyoshi Akiyama and Niklaus Wyss.

Franz Allers will be guest conductor for the special "Night in Old Vienna" with soprano Reri Grist, and another special January concert will be presented by Miss Price with Ozawa on the podium.

Guest pianists will be Claudio Arrau, Robert Casadesus, Alexis Weissenberg, Stephen Bishop and Peter Serkin, Masuko Ushioda, Isaac Stern, Stuart Canin, Pinchas Zukerman and Itzhak Perlman will be guest violinists.

Vocalists will be sopranos Heather Harper, Martina Arroyo and Angeles Gulin; tenors Kenneth Riegle, Placido Domingo and Anastoasios Vrenious; contraltos Maureen Forrester and Yvonne Minton; baritone Tom Krause and bassos Thomas Paul and Martti Talvela.

Also appearing as guest artists will be dancer Lucero Tena and Flamenco singer Gabriel Moreno.

Car Flips, Driver Taken To Hospital

A San Anselmo man has been released from Marin General Hospital after being examined for possible internal injuries after an auto accident Friday on Drakes View Drive in Inverness Park.

The driver, George A. O'Hara, 25, of 125 Larkview Drive, was taken to the hospital after his car rolled over on the drive at about 11:30 a.m., according to the California Highway Patrol.

Your job relies on electricity-and on our job to provide it.

No matter how you make a living, your job relies on electricity. Without it, factories, schools, hospitals, stores and office buildings where people work simply could not operate.

Our job is to serve the demand for electricity without brownouts or blackouts that would interrupt work and most other activities.

The demand for electricity increases with growing population, expanding needs of commerce and industry and new equipment to clean up our environment. Therefore, we must provide power facilities to stay ahead of growing demand and prevent power shortages.

Some individuals and groups are trying to slow down or stop construction of electric plants and transmission lines. However, we must continue building. And nowadays it takes about 10 years to acquire a suitable site, obtain regulatory approvals, construct and get a new power plant "on the line".

Qualified, competent and responsible public agencies assure that in building new facilities we serve the best public interests, including environmental and ecological considerations.

To keep your electricity on tomorrow, we must build today. PG and E

U.S. To Tell Airlines To Rewire Rear Exits

WASHINGTON (UPI) —In an effort to thwart hijackers who parachute from jetliners, the government said Monday it would order airlines to rewire the rear exit of 600 Boeing 727 jetliners to prevent the exit from being opened in flight.

The 727 has been the target of hijacker-parachutists because of the rear staircase that unfolds below the tail of the plane.

The staircase makes it relatively easy for a hijacker to escape. Any attempt to bail out of the side exits would trap the hijacker in the jetliner's slip stream, and slam him into the plane's tail structure.

The Federal Aviation Administration decision Monday followed a hijacking Friday of an Eastern Boeing 727 in which the hijacker collected $303,000 in ransom and then bailed out of the plane over Honduras.

The modification is not a complicated procedure, observers said. It requires the installation of an electrical switch that will close when the plane is on the ground, and the weight of the plane compresses the wheel struts.

When the wheel switch is in the closed position, the pilot would be able to open the rear staircase from a switch in the cockpit.

But once the plane is in flight and the wheels retracted, the pilot would be unable to open the exit and lower the staircase. Nor would the switch be activated if the pilot simply lowered his wheels in flight since the circuit will not close unless there is weight on the wheels.

Industry experts said the changeover would not create a safety hazard. Even without the use of the rear staircase, the jetliner meets FAA escape requirements, the observers said.

In addition to Eastern, the major users of the 727 jetliner are United, Trans World, American and Northwest.

Council, Planners Set Joint Session

The Cotati City Council will meet in joint session with the planning commission at 7:30 p.m. today to begin review of the General plan.

The review of the year-old plan was called by the three new youthful council members who said they have some reservations about the increased population the plan sets.

Nixon Is Subpoenaed In Hughes Book Fuss

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—President Nixon, his brother Donald, and Howard Hughes were among those subpoenaed to testify in a court hearing into a book that alleges Nixon took thousands of dollars from Hughes for political favors, it was learned today.

Legal sources said the subpoenas were issued by the Superior Court Norwalk branch late Friday.

The subpoena issued for the President ordered him to appear, with any of his records pertinent to the case, at 2 p.m. on May 18 or to give a deposition, the sources said.

It was regarded as extremely doubtful that Nixon would appear, or could be required to.

The subpoenas were the latest actions in a suit centered on "The Nixon-Hughes Loan," a newly-published book by British journalist Nicholas North-Broome.

The book charges that after a $205,000 loan from Hughes to Nixon's brother Donald in 1956, while Nixon was vice president, airlines and aircraft companies owned by Hughes were the beneficiaries of a series of favorable decisions by government agencies, which in some cases reversed earlier unfavorable rulings. The loan was never repaid, North-Broome said. The book contains copies of what the author said are the loan agreement, notarized by the paymaster of the Senate—where Nixon had his office as vice president—and of an agreement between the Hughes organization and a former Hughes accountant, in which the accountant allegedly accepted $150,000 in return for a promise never to reveal his role in channelling Hughes' funds to the Nixons.

A civil suit was filed in Superior Court last week asking for an injunction to block distribution and sale of the book. The suit was filed by Victor T. Schaub, who has identified himself only as a "legal researcher" and said he is not connected with any of the principals in the case.

Schaub contended in his suit that the book endangers free elections and national security by damaging the President's reputation without grounds.

Subpoenas were also issued for Phillip Reiner, the former Hughes accountant, Noah Dietrich, former top aide to Hughes, Senate Paymaster William A. Ridgeley, former Nixon law partner William Lassleben, and Pulitzer-prize winning columnist Jack Anderson.

Budget Session Set

The Kentfield School District board, meeting at 8 p.m. tonight, will examine individual schools' requests for equipment in the 1972-73 budget, prior to visiting the schools this Saturday.

Report Due On School Boundaries

The Mill Valley School District board will receive a report from the Marin County Superintendent of Schools Office, which outlines a series of possible boundary changes for Old Mill, Park and Alto schools, at its regular meeting at 8 p.m. today in the Park School Auditorium.

The board will open the meeting to public discussion of the county's recommendations.

The report recommends five possible solutions to the overcrowded situation at Old Mill School, which would, in turn, affect the other schools in the district. They are:

1. Transfer 130 students from Old Mill to Park School.
2. Relocate the fourth and fifth grades currently attending Old Mill School to vacated Edna Maguire School.
3. Do nothing to change boundary lines for one year.
4. Transfer the entire fifth grade and part of the fourth grade from Old Mill to the new middle school.
5. Adopt the "45-15 plan" for all-year-round school.

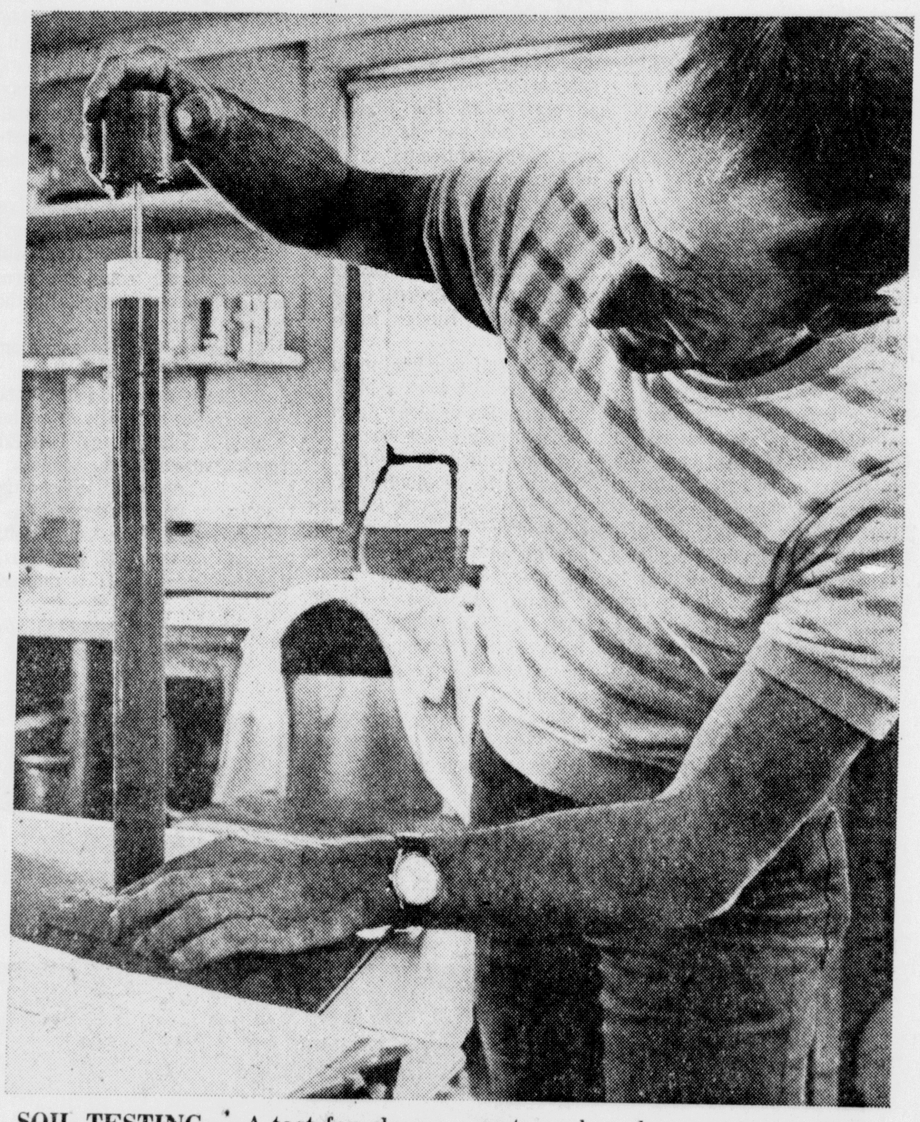
GRAZING AND GRADING — As tractors cut a path along the side of a rolling hill east of Novato, a lone horse stands his ground undaunted as he grazes within yards of construction of the Highway 101 bypass in Novato. The unidentified operator from Freeman-Sondgroth Construction Co., co-contractors on the job, glances at the rural scene his work will change.

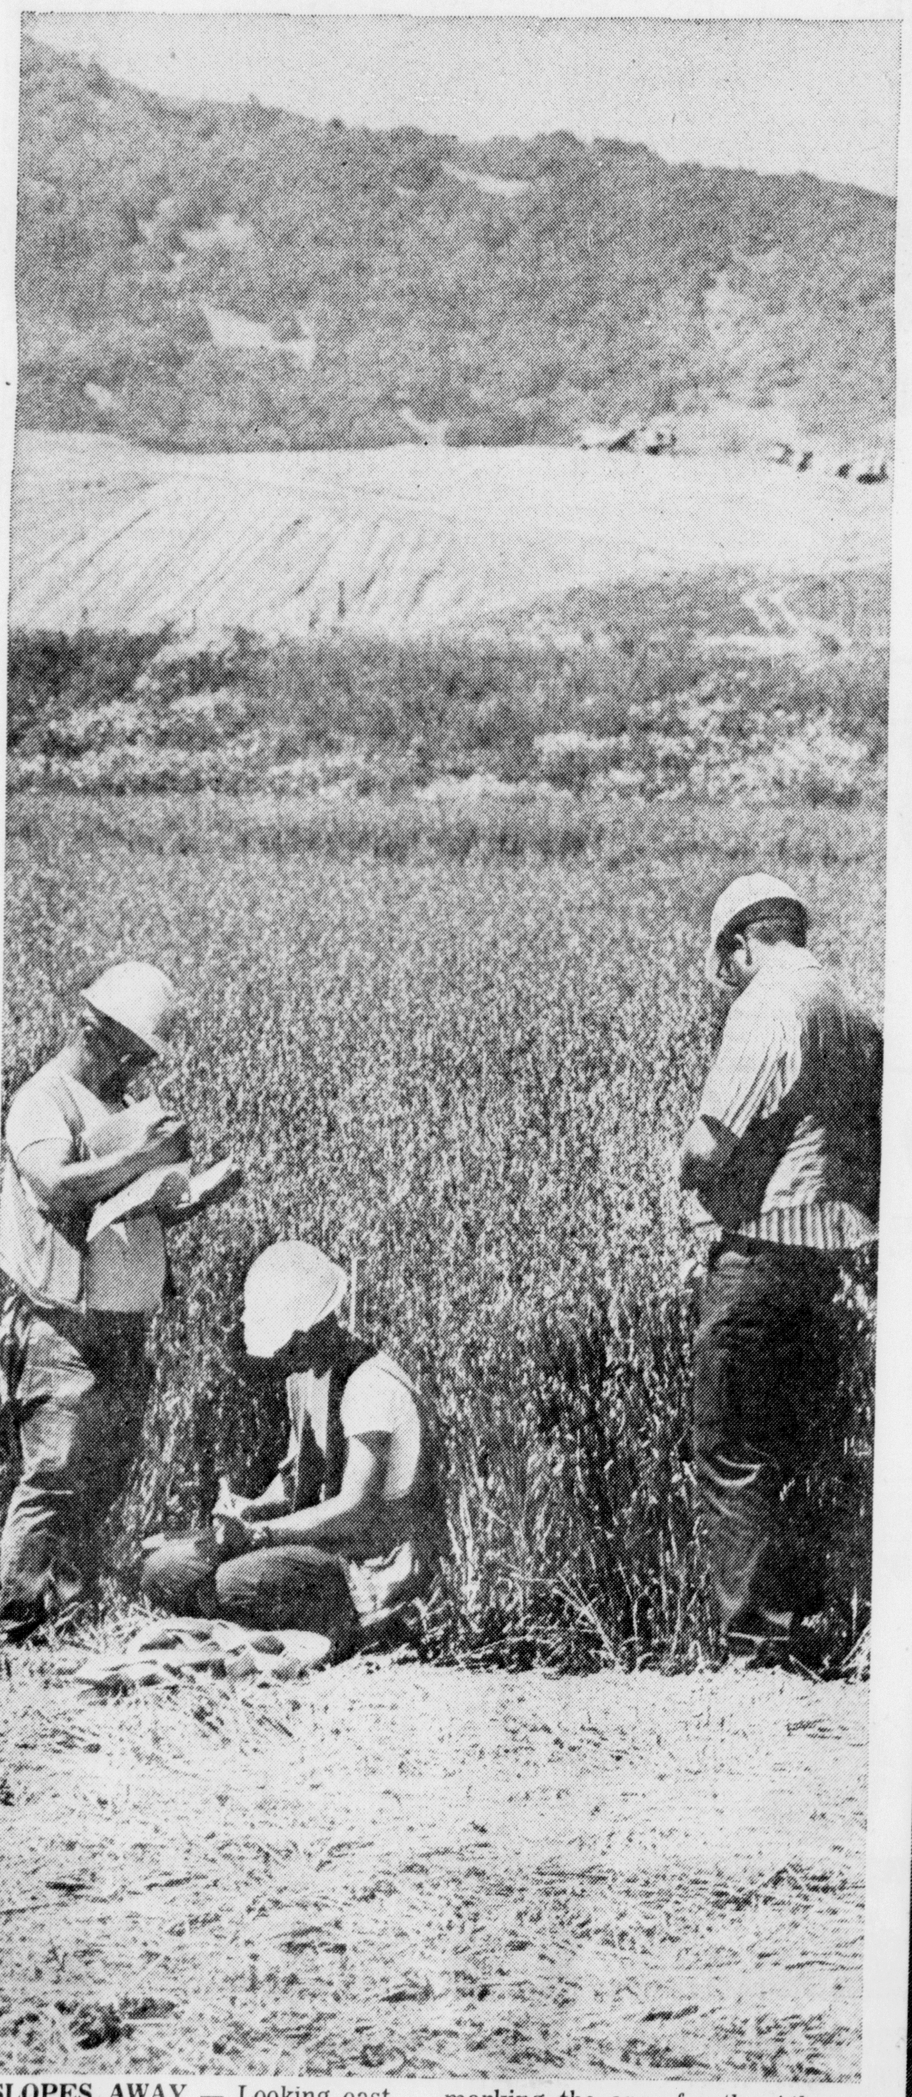
ONCE TREE-STUDDED — A fleet of earth moving equipment, like locusts, spread across Reservoir Hill east of downtown Novato leaving the land barren where once Eucalyptus and oak trees flourished. The leveling of the hill is part of initial work on the $13.9 million, 5.3 mile Highway 101 bypass in Novato, which will carry through traffic east of downtown and eliminate the traffic bottleneck in Novato. Freeman-Sondgroth and Lew Jones Construction Co. are contractors on the job expected to be completed in mid 1974. (Independent-Journal Photos by Alfred Arn)

Novato Bypass Cuts Way Across Rolling Country

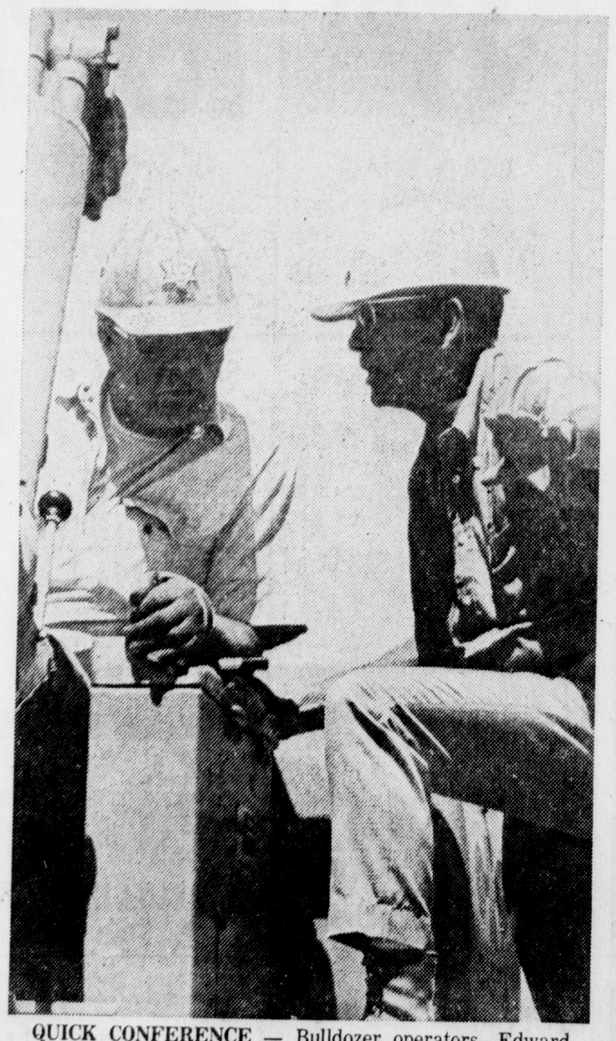
BIG JOB — A mammoth wheel on an earth scrapper signifies the magnitude of the bypass job, which will create a highway across marshland and hills, east of downtown Novato. The work will extend from near Highway 37 to San Marin Drive and include three interchanges, Rowland Boulevard, DeLong Avenue, and Atherton Avenue-San Marin Drive.



SOIL TESTING — A test for clay is conducted at the State Division of Highways field office on Alice Street by Joseph Tosches. A laboratory has been set up at the office for the various tests required for the job, and the state staff is monitoring the job.



SLOPES AWAY — Looking east from Highway 101, north of Atherton Avenue, a work crew from the State Division of Highways prepares to place slope stakes, marking the area for the Atherton Avenue-San Marin Drive interchange. In the background is a rounded knoll that was once a wooded area.



QUICK CONFERENCE — Bulldozer operators, Edward Van Meter, left, and Vince Ramirez, right, have a brief talk to plan the work ahead on the bypass project.

DAY IN THE COUNTRY — Under a broad umbrella to provide shade from a hot sun, an unidentified tractor operator rides across the semi-rural hills east of Novato, giving the appearance of a man taking a drive in the country. In reality, he is cutting a path for a bypass that will change the character of the area to that of urban bustle.

DOMINICAN COLLEGE

Teaching Twins To Step Aside

By BRUCE MARTIN

As Gertrude Stein might have written: the sisters are sisters are twin sisters.

Dominican Sisters Martin and Justin, O.P., are twins and have been together for the past 25 years as fixtures in the scheme of things at Dominican College in San Rafael.

They were born in San Francisco in 1903 and, through similar routes, arrived permanently at Dominican College — Sister Justin in 1941 and Sister Martin in 1947.

Now 69, they apparently believe it's time to step to the edge of the limelight. Both plan to teach one more year full time and Sister Martin in August will retire as dean of the college's graduate division.

Both have served in top-level capacities and both have taught for years at the college. Both graduated from Dominican College, Sister Martin in 1925 and Sister Justin in 1927.

Sister Martin for the past 22 years has been dean of the college's graduate division, which she helped found in 1950. She had obtained her master's degree in 1927 from the University of California at Berkeley and, after teaching in Vallejo and San Francisco Dominican schools, gained her doctorate and came to Dominican College permanently in 1947 to teach English.

When she retires as dean in August, she will teach one more year full-time, then become a part-time instructor at the college.

Sister Justin served 12 years until 1965 as mother general, overseeing operations of all Dominican "congregations" from Los Angeles to Reno. (The campus also serves as headquarters for the Dominican "mother house.")

After teaching in Vallejo, Stockton and San Francisco, Sister Justin became mother superior of the college's convent in 1941. From 1947 to 1953 her sole duties were to teach humanities and the classics in the high school which then was located on college grounds. The school, now San Domenico School for Girls, moved from the San Rafael site to San Anselmo in 1964.

Like her twin, Sister Justin will teach one more year full time, then become a part-time instructor.

Then, they say the will have more time to devote to their hobby — flowers. Patches of rhododendrons, azaleas and camellias tended by the nuns dot the area near Guzman Hall, and tall rose bushes line two gravel paths near the building.

The girls' famly was intensely religious. The twins attended Dominican elementary and high schools in San Francisco, following in the footsteps of their mother, aunts and other relatives who had attended Dominican schools. Their grandmother in 1850 was a student at Santa Catalina Convent in Monterey when that school became the first of its kind in the state.

Their most fulfilling experiences?

"Well," said Sister Justin, "while I served as mother general the planning of the campus's three main buildings was done and the buildings were built and, of course, San Domenico School was started then."

(The buildings — library, dormitory and kitchen-dining room —are the largest on campus.)

"But," she added with a laugh, "it wasn't so interesting trying to collect the money to pay for the buildings."

Sister Martin "enjoyed interviewing, keeping track of, encouraging my students over the years, and helping some of them finish school."

"And," she said, "I have a feeling of pride for our graduate program."

The graduate program includes a range of study, with masters degrees granted in five departments: education ("our largest"), English, history, music and French.

French will be dropped from the program at the end of the year, said Sister Martin, "because of low enrollment and the consequent difficulty in financing it."

Rejection Of Building Plan Urged

The Marin County Planning Commission today urged its counterpart in San Rafael to reject a proposed 10-story office building north of the Civic Center.

The commission's action, on a 6-0 vote with Commissioner George P. Leonard abstaining, will be forwarded to the county board of supervisors for its concurrence tomorrow.

The commission, in urging rejection of the massive office building and restaurant, said it was "not compatible with the nonurban character of Marin County, particulary the sensitive environment of the Civic Center."

Further, the commission agreed with a staff recommendation that the project would add to already bad traffic conditions at the Manuel T. Freitas Parkway interchange with Highway 101.

The San Rafael Planning Commission will consider the proposal tomorrow night.

Plans for the project, proposed by San Rafael contractor Arthur R. Nicolaisen, call for the 10-story office building, two smaller commercial buildings, underground parking, a service station and a large restaurant.

It would be located at the base of the hill adjacent to the highway interchange and overlooking the new Veterans Memorial Building.

County Planning Director Werner Von Gundell urged the commission to take a strong stand against the proposal since the San Rafael planning staff is recommending denial and needs support.

Leonard abstained from today's vote.

Nursery Plan Is On Agenda

The Mill Valley Planning Commission, meeting at 8 p.m. today, will hold a public hearing on an application to operate a pre-school nursery for 25 children at 354 Sycamore Avenue.

According to planning director Tom W. Newton, the planning staff has recommended that a maximum of 10 children be permitted to attend the nursery.

The application for the use permit was made by Rogert C. Butler of Mill Valley.

The commission will also consider a request for a conditional use permit to operate an auto repair shop at 475 Miller Avenue from Phillip Menzio, of Mill Valley.

Fireman Also Places Angela In Marin

SAN JOSE (UPI)—A Marin County fireman remained unshaken today in his identification of Angela Davis as the woman he saw in a service station across from the courthouse the day before the Aug. 7, 1970, fatal kidnaping and gun battle.

Michael Vonada testified that he recognized her by the spaces between her teeth when she put a cigar into her mouth.

Vonada was the third person to identify Miss Davis as being at the service station along with Jonathan Jackson, who was killed the following day in the kidnap attempt.

Vonada's cross-examination was concluded with Defense Attorney Leo Branton's question, "someone told you where Angela Davis would be sitting in this courtroom, isn't that a fact?"

"Absolutely not," Vonada replied.

Vonada and the other two witnesses last week places Miss Davis and Jackson near the courthouse in a rented yellow van similar to the one used the next day in the kidnaping and escape attempt.

Alden Fleming, the station owner, and his son, Peter, 25, testified that Miss Davis and her companion came to the station on Aug. 6, 1970, because they couldn't get the rented van started. Peter Fleming said he drove a truck to the stalled van, started it with "jump" cables and returned to the station. The young man and woman followed and paid a $6 service charge, he said.

All three witnesses —who brought the number called by the prosecution to 80 — identified Miss Davis as the woman accompanying Jonathan Jackson.

The state contends Miss Davis, an avowed Communist and former UCLA philosophy instructor, supplied the weapons used by Jackson when he entered the courtroom of Judge Harold J. Haley, freed three convicts and took the judge and four others hostage. She is also accused of helping plot the kidnaping in an effort to free Jackson's brother, George, who was being held on murder charges in nearby San Quentin Prison.

Jackson, Haley and two of the escaping prisoners died in the van during the ensuing shootout.

The elder Fleming, when asked if the young woman was in court, rose from the witness chair, walked to within three feet of Miss Davis and, pointing his finger at her, said: "This lady here." Peter Fleming made his identification from the stand.

Under cross-examination, the father identified four of nine photographs of young black women as Miss Davis. He was correct on three of the pictures, but the fourth was a photo of Mrs. Fania Jordan, Miss Davis' sister.

Peter Fleming admitted under cross-examination that 11 days after the incident—on Aug. 17, 1970—he could not positively identify the woman in the van from a sheath of photographs, including one of Miss Davis.

Hayakawa Says He Won't Quit

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Dr. S. I. Hayakawa, president of San Francisco State College, today denied emphatically that he plans to resign at the end of the fall semester.

Hayakawa commented on published reports that he not only was quitting but that he had named Academic Affairs Director Don Garrity as his successor. Hayakawa said both statements were "nonsense."

Mrs. Fritchlee, a student and housewife, left a 10-page note on a table and three empty drug bottles were discovered, Cornish said.

Her body was discovered by her husband, James Louis Fritchlee, who had last seen her alive about 10 hours before, Cornish reported. She was a native of California.

Reagan Defends Bagley 'Bus' Bill

I-J Special Report

SACRAMENTO — A controversial 1971 state law by Assemblyman William T. Bagley, R-San Rafael, has been defended by Gov. Ronald Reagan as necessary to prevent court-ordered busing.

Critics of the law (AB 724) have claimed it will mean "forced busing" across school district lines, perhaps leading to busing of schoolchildren beteen Marin and ghetto schools in San Francisco.

The governor, in a letter to Bagley, declared that "nothing in this bill speaks to moving children across district lines. What this bill simply does is to create an administrative mechanism to handle the problem rather than to leave the issue for judicial action."

Reagan stressed that "no bill last year received a more exhaustive review by me and my office than this one." He said the bill was "a constructive way to assure a quality education for all children while at the same time preserving the best traditions of our school system, including the concept of neighborhood schools."

Bagley, releasing the governor's letter, said that since his bill applies only within school districts with racial imbalances, it has no effect in Marin or Sonoma counties.

Bone Marrow Transplant First

LEYDEN, The Netherlands (UPI)—A Dutch medical team has successfully transplanted bone marrow between persons unrelated to each other in what a hospital spokesman said today was the first operation of its kind in the world.

A spokesman for Leyden University Hospital, where the surgery was performed last week, said previous bone marrow transplants had been undertaken only between donors and patients who were related.

He said it had been believed by medical scientists a successful bone marrow transplant only was possible if the donor and patient were related.

The recipient was an 18-year-old Dutchman who had been under extensive treatment for aplastic anemia, a sudden halt of the functions of the bone marrow which produces vital blood components called corpuscles and platelets, the spokesman said.

New Schools Chief May Be Chosen

San Anselmo School District trustees may decide on a new district superintendent at a special meeting set for tomorrow at 7:30 p.m. in the Red Hill School library.

A closed session to consider which of five candidates to hire was tentatively placed on the agenda for the meeting. Trustees already have said that Supt. Ivan D. Chappell, who took the position in April on a temporary basis after the death of Donald Shaw, is not among those being considered.

Also at the meeting, trustees may establish the size of the district's teaching staff for the coming year, but will make the choice only if enough information is available by the time of the meeting to do so.

The board will also consider Chappell's recommendation that the firm of Leader, Jarvis and Keigwin be appointed to audit the district's books at a fee of $1,400.

Railroad Plans

A plan for a coastal railroad to bring visitors to West Marin will be discussed at a meeting of Ad Hoc Orange at 7:30 p.m. in Room 332 of the Marin County Civic Center. Ad Hoc Orange is a group seeking new modes of transportation to West Marin.

Absentee Ballots For Primary Available

Absentee balloting for the June 6 primary election opened today.

Voters who will be absent from their precincts on election day may obtain absentee ballots either by mail or in person through the county elections office at the Marin Civic Center.

The office is open from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. weekdays in room 152.

Applications for absentee ballots must be received by the office before 5 p.m. May 30, although voters may ballot at the office after May 30 in case of emergency.

The absentee ballots must be returned to the elections office by 5 p.m. June 5.

Persons applying by mail for absentee ballots must include their reason for being absent on election day, their forwarding address if the ballot is to be mailed to other than their home address, their home address, and signature.

Application forms for absentee ballots will be provided every registered voter on the back of his polling place address card, which will be mailed during the fourth week of this month.

Queen Mary Pays Her Way

LONG BEACH, Calif. (UPI) —The luxury liner Queen Mary, retired from the sea for economic reasons, opened as a tourist attraction a year ago today and has taken in $6 million.

City Manager John R. Mansell disclosed Sunday that the ship had attracted 1.5 million visitors, who spent an average of $4 apiece on admission fees, gift shop, restaurant and bar purchases and parking.

A 400-room hotel is expected to open aboard ship late this year. The ship already houses several restaurants and lounges and the Jacques Cousteau Living Sea exhibit. Two more restaurants, the Winston Churchill and the Lady Hamilton, are scheduled to open in midsummer.

Injuries Minor To Novato Pedestrian

A Novato pedestrian suffered minor injuries shortly after 6 p.m. Friday when struck by a car on Ignacio Boulevard at Alameda del Prado.

Marin General Hospital said Lt. Col. Dure C. Jensen, 59, of 537 Fairway Drive, was treated for back bruises. Novato police reported he apparently did not see an oncoming car driven by Karen June Radar, 31, of 450 Alameda del Prado, and was knocked down by the auto's right fender.

Marin Women

Sausalito Girl Back From A Dooley Foundation Tour

By MAYBELLE SPECKMANN

Beng a stewardess for a charter airline that flies all over the world is not excitement enough for De Miner of Sausalito.

Her interest in exotic places and people was better fulfilled by being also a volunteer for three months with the San Francisco-based Thomas A. Dooley Foundation. This is a non-profit medical group serving throughout Southeast Asia, which uses stewardesses as teachers and assistants in a short-term volunteer health program.

HOME BRIEFLY between flights, De was eager to tell of her experiences in Laos while living in the little village of Thadeua on the Mekong River. She and two nurses and one other stewardess were the only Caucasians on the staff of the clinic maintained there by the Dooley Foundation.

An Oklahoma State University graduate in 1968 with the B.S. degree in psychology and minor in sociology, De said she had always been interested in volunteer work with the Peace Corps but thought it was too involved in attempting to restructure the life style and culture of other peoples.

"Being a volunteer with the Dooley Foundation appealed to me," she explained, "because all they do is try to raise health standards. They don't interfere with native culure. If you tell people what they believe is wrong, they are confused.

"THE LIFE expectancy of these gentle people is 40 years. If you can just teach them simple things like boiling their water, cooking meat thoroughly, eating a more balanced diet — they have fresh vegetables and fruit but eat mostly rice — and wearing thong sandals to prevent parasites, they could live at least 10 to 15 years longer.

"Though we helped the nurses at the clinic and didn't need medical training because we wrked under the supervision of nurses, stewardesses are mainly responsible for the health education program. This is geared mainly to children because they are more receptive than adults.

"We would go first into the schools using visual aids, such as puppet shows, flip charts and posters, especially ones with blown up photographs of children printed with their words in Lao language repeating the health messages presented in the puppet shows. This was very exciting for the people to see pictures of someone they knew, and they made them pay more attention to the messages."

Since art and photography are De's hobbies, she made these charts and posters herself in addition to more than 100 pictures she took of her Lao friends with a Minolta SRT-101 camera with telephoto lense.

"After finishing at the school", she continued, "we would go back to the clinic and do the same thing there. That way we got the adults too.

"WE ALSO went by truck or boat on the river every day to one of 11 villages for refugees o administer medical aid. Laos is not over populated — it has only 2.5 million people — and that is one of the reasons everyone is fighting over that area," she noted.

"On one of the river trips we saw a body floating in the water with hands tied behind his back. We were going to drag it ashore, but they said to let it alone because it was probably the work of the Patket Lao, which is equivalent to the Viet Cong in Vietnam."

DE MINER, a Trans International Airlines stewardess and volunteer with the Thomas A. Dooley Foundation, treats a young Lao boy despite his angry protest that it hurts. The people understand that treatment can cure sores, she said, but they don't understand how to prevent them.

As for her personal living arrangements, De said she and her associates lived in a fairly good modern house that was quite comfortable — if one didn't mind the rats, snakes and six inch scorpions everywhere.

"THE RATS LIVED right in the house with us and were so noisy at night they didn't let us sleep," she said, "but we never could find them and finally got used to them. There were so many snakes, including cobras and pythons — one time on the river a big python dropped out of a tree in front of us — that we had to be careful where we stepped."

Other memorable experiences for the young stewardesses included attending a Lao festival and wedding and watching the delivery of a baby with the mother standing up and the umbilical cord cut with a piece of bamboo.

"The funny thing," she said, "is that you get used to things like this. I wasn't shocked — I just found it interesting."

DE SAID it was easy to pick up some of the Lao language, a musical, tonal language of voice inflection rather than one of grammar, and proceeded to prove the point by speaking several sentences that did indeed sound musical.

Despite the very hot, damp climate, the snakes and the rats, De says she would go back tomorrow.

"I loved every minute of it," she declared. "I could be packed and ready to go in 30 minutes."

PHOTOGRAPHY IS the major hobby of De Miner, Sausalito stewardess. This is one of her own favorite pictures of an 8-year-old girl of the village of Na Long caring for a brother almost as big as she is. Women have children as long as they can — about one a year — but infant mortality is very high, De Miner says.

GARDENING IS the favorite pastime of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Tobin, who celebrated their golden wedding anniversary Saturday. (Independent-Journal photo)

GOLDEN WEDDING

Couple's Reflection On Happy Marriage

Keeping busy, not being bored, going to church and trying to be good Christians, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Tobin of Loma Verde said helped them to have a happy marriage for 50 years. The couple celebrated their golden wedding anniversary on Saturday.

Anna Biciunas of Chicago, Ill., met Mr. Tobin, a native of Boston, Mass., when she came to see her brother in San Diego. Mr. Tobin and Anthony Biciunas were serving in the Navy. The Tobins were married at the Los Angeles Sacred Heart Church on May 6, 1922.

Mr. Tobin had joined the Navy in 1908 and retired in 1938, but he was recalled for two years service when World War II was declared. He was an observation balloon pilot on the New York when it went to South America during his early career, and during World War I served aboard the USS North Carolina which carried gold to Europe to aid American tourists stranded there.

He also served on the Tacoma, which conveyed 18 merchant ships to Queenstown, Ireland. On the return trip the ship stopped at Halifax Harbor and they arrived as two ships, one an ammunition ship, collided in the harbor. Many of the buildings on the island were damaged or destroyed and many people were killed, according to Mr. Tobin. The men on board the Tacoma had to go ashore to protect property from vandalism, he said.

Earlier in his career, he was on a seagoing tug which explored the North Atlantic for bodies and wreckage of the sunken Titanic. He was also stationed on the Dubuque when the U.S. was surveying for the Panama Canal, and while there he sighted Haley's Comet.

After the Tobins were married, they lived for 12 years in San Diego, where he was stationed. The couple had four children. Their daughters are Alice Tobin of San Rafael, a third grade teacher at San Pedro School in San Rafael, and Mrs. James A. Carroll of Ross. Their sons each were killed in traffic accidents at the age of 4 and 7.

Their main hobby is gardening, which they also do for the exercise.

"He has a green thumb," Mrs. Tobin said of her husband. Their specialties are roses, chrysanthemums and the "miracle herb," fresh garlic, which they eat every day. "We haven't had a cold in years," Mr. Tobin said.

Their lives are centered around their family. They talked of their daughter Anne Carroll, who majored in art at Dominican, and look forward to the show she will have at the Redwood Bank in September. Their daughter Alice stops by frequently to take them for a ride.

"We've seen a lot of the country around here with Alice," Mr. Tobin said.

The Tobins are members of St. Anthony of Padua Church in Novato and the Fleet Reserve Association.

Mr. and Mrs. Carroll had a dinner at their home in Ross Saturday night for the Tobin's attended by the immediate family.

San Rafael Church Is Wedding Setting

Married Saturday at Trinity Lutheran Church in San Rafael, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Nelson Perino will live in San Rafael when they return from a Lake Tahoe wedding trip.

The bride, the former Meredith (Mitzi) Lynn Jackson, chose as her wedding attendants Mrs. Kathy Boyle of Novato as matron of honor and Mrs. David Martin of San Francisco, the bridegroom's sister.

Carl Nelson of Daly City served as best man for his cousin. The guests were seated by Thomas M. Jackson of San Rafael, the bride's brother, and Robert Nelson of Menlo Park, the bridegroom's cousin.

They later greeted guests at a reception at Peacock Gap Country Club.

Mitzi, who is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas O. Jackson of San Rafael, was graduated from Terra Linda High School and attended the College of Marin.

She is employed in the law office of Charles Read Best and Raymond H. Shone in San Rafael.

Richard is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Perino of San Francisco and the grandson of Mrs. Elena DaRos of San Francisco.

Now employed at Juvenile Hall in San Francisco, he is a graduate of Lincoln High School and San Francisco State College.

HELEN HELP US!

By HELEN BOTTEL

Some People Swing Weekends; Others Prefer Straight Life

DEAR HELEN:

What do you do when you find out that good friends are secret swingers?

We've known this couple for two years. He's "management" in my husband's company. She enjoys all those ordinary things I like — knitting, tennis, taking our children to the zoo, get-togethers with our middle-class friends.

But we always knew they weren't available on Saturday nights — that was the time to visit families, they said.

The other day I was baby-sitting her kids (we help each other out this way), and little Jamie pulled out a dresser drawer and dumped the contents on the floor. In putting them back, I found this magazine for "swingers," giving phone numbers, etc., and ads that leave nothing much to the imagination. Some of the ads were circled. With dates — all for Saturday nights.

Every time I see my friends now, I'm afraid we'll get propositioned. How can people who seem so normal go in for mate-swapping? — SHOCKED STRAIGHT

DEAR S.S.:

You'll never know unless you ask them — and then you'd probably find out what several books and articles on "swingers" have already said: six days a week they live conventional lives, but Saturday night, they break away, in what they consider an acceptable means of avoiding marriage boredom.

I don't agree, nor do you, but as long as they don't try to convert their straight friends, why not pretend you never saw that magazine? It won't be easy! — H.

DEAR HELEN:

I have epilepsy, but it's pretty well under control — so much so that I am getting married soon.

I would like to have a job and I am well qualified, but in my town, no one will take a chance on me.

You see, I sing (or rather sang) in our church choir. Loved it. But I had a seizure during services. It was the first in a long time, but it shook the members so much that I was asked — in a nice way of course — not to come back. The word gets around. Must I be an "invalid" when I'm not? The only "help" I received was from a rehabilitation agency that put me to work as a packer with the mentally retarded at almost nothing an hour. I'm a college graduate, and a music major — and I can function very well in the business world, too.

Is there hope? — SHUNNED

DEAR SHUNNED:

Your church choir deserves a hatful of sour notes! Where's their Christian kindness?

A director of your State Rehabilitation Agency tells me that your case will be reviewed if you will make an appointment for an interview. He feels sure you can be placed in work you will enjoy.

Yes, there's hope! — H.

Here's Doctor With Difference

By ARTHUR E. ROWSE

WASHINGTON — Dr. Marshall Mandell is a doctor with a difference.

He feels that there are specific reasons in the environment and food products for many, if not most, of the mysterious ailments which plague people in today's confusing world.

Instead of assuming that emotional disturbances lie behind ailments which cannot be readily diagnosed, he looks for possible allergies to chemicals in the air, water and food.

He has not found many answers yet, but he thinks he has come onto some important clues. To help track down the actual causes of such problems, he has founded the Center for Clinical Ecology in Norwalk, Conn.

IN A SPEECH to a recent meeting on water quality here, Dr. Mandell said many common physical and mental diseases are due to unsuspected elements in the environment.

He would include among such ailments as hyperactivity in children, arthritis, colitis, fatigue, overweight, alcoholism, depression and headaches.

These problems, he said, "can be shown to be real illnesses that are due to elements outside of the body and have nothing to do with the psyche or stress."

Dr. Mandell considers an allergy as an inborn inability to handle trace substances which have no apparent effect on those with normal body functions. In larger doses, many of these substances can be highly poisonous.

"Between one-third and two-thirds of the people who are seriously ill have an allergy problem," says Dr. Mandell, "and chemicals in water are one part of it."

AMONG THE possible causes of allergic reactions, in his view, are fluoride and chlorine which are purposely added to many drinking water supplies to combat tooth decay and bacterial impurities.

But he would also include on the list a number of substances which get into drinking water accidentally, such as weed killers, insecticides and nitrates from fertilizers. He feels that some people become allergic to water that has been in a plastic container.

He sees problems from air pollution just as great indoors as outdoors. He refers to pollution from heating system fuels, from smoking, from cleaning supplies, from hair sprays, from pesticide sprays and even from materials that are part of normal living.

"There isn't any organ of the body that isn't susceptible to environmental pollutants, because once these substances get in the bloodstream, they can go any place," he said.

At the Center for Clinical Ecology, which he heads, people with mysterious problems will be studied in a relatively pollution-free environment. Through "provocative testing," exposing patients to various chemicals in small doses, Dr. Mandell hopes to pinpoint the environmental causes.

HE ALREADY claims to have cured one woman's severe illness which had been associated with emotional disturbances. He discovered that she was allergic to exhaust fumes. He found household cleaners to be the cause of another's severe depression.

But Dr. Mandell has barely scratched the surface in finding the answers. A much bigger problem will be getting rid of the pollutants.

All Started With Story In Paper

PORTLAND — One day Marian Anderson was reading the paper when she saw an item describing how a woman collected coupons to buy a kidney machine which saved a friend's life.

"That's something I could do," said Mrs. Anderson. "I have some spare time."

She wrote to a Minneapolis firm to ask how many coupons were required to pay for a kidney machine. When she learned the number required — 640,000 coupon points for one machine — Mrs. Anderson nearly gave up the idea.

Then she attended a statewide convention in Eugene, Ore., and asked for volunteer collectors of coupons, one for each of the state's 36 counties. The coupons would have to be collected before June 1973 when the redemption plan ends. Before long Mrs. Anderson had her 36 chairmen, plus collectors recruited by the Kidney Association of Oregon, plus churches, women's clubs, schools and fraternal organizations.

Since then she has collected more than 10 million coupons, enough to purchase 19 kidney machines. And she's still going strong, with collection boxes filling her home and squads of workers counting, wrapping and shipping them.

Why did she do it?

"I never had kidney disease and didn't know anybody who had it," she said. "We had obtained four machines before I even knew what they looked like. But we're saving lives, and that's enough incentive for anyone." (Los Angeles Times Syndicate)

Ralph Nader Claims Women Are Underpaid

"Women rank first in only one category," Ralph Nader points out in this month's Pageant magazine. "They head the list of those with poverty incomes."

The consumer affairs advocate explained in the magazine interview that women college graduates earn average annual incomes equivalent to what men with eighth grade educations make. "Women are being paid only $60 for every $100 paid to men in salaries," Mr. Nader said, "and the unemployment rate for women in the work force is twice that of men."

Although there has been, up to now, no clear-cut women's vote as a body for candidates who are sympathetic to their needs, Nader feels women can have an important impact on the 1972 elections. "Not only is Shirley Chisholm the first woman candidate for President in a major party in the history of the United States," he said, "but women's issues are surfacing as important matters on which to judge all candidates."

Nader urged women to demand clear-cut stands on specific issues from those who seek to serve them in office.

"Nearly every candidate for President this year has talked about the need to advance equal rights for women," he said, "but if things are to change, women have to demand more than rhetoric. What does it mean when a candidate 'supports' legislation of interest to women but fails to vote at a crucial stage of the bill? What does it mean when a public official asserts that sex should not be a barrier to important posts but fails to appoint women to his own staff? When evaluating candidates on women's issues, women should think about how important a part this is in their campaigns."

The election this year, Nader concludes, is a challenge to the American woman. "Will you use your opportunity to make women a significant force in political life today — and tomorrow?" he asks. "Child care, abortion, tax deductions for child care expenses, sex discrimination in education and safer cosmetics are issues every woman has a stake in."

Over 30 Years Experience In Nutrition

HERE'S HEALTH!

by JUNE EMBURY

UCLA anthropologist, Dr. R. D. McCracken says your brain can "freak out" if you eat too much sugar. He specializes in cultural diet patterns, which indicate that primitive man ate meat and fruit. Then 10,000 years ago, our ancestors learned how to cultivate grain and began a switch to an unnatural diet, high in starches and sugars.

As sugar consumption rose astronomically, the Dr. points out, degenerative diseases did too - including schizophrenia, diabetes, heart disease, stroke, alcoholism and possibly even cancer.

Pure or almost pure sugar, says Dr. McCracken, is the worst of all because it triggers insulin over-production, which reduces blood sugar to harmfully low levels (hypoglycemia.) Most affected is the brain, which begins to malfunction. "It freaks out." (Low blood sugar is a profound, all too common disease. We stock a number of authoritative books on the subject, discussing diagnonis and control.)

Bagley Represents Party — And District

The Republican party's best vote-getter in Marin County usually has a little trouble in the primary. And this year is no exception for Assemblyman William T. Bagley.

Two candidates from the party's right wing are challenging Bagley for the nomination on June 6. They are Edward J. Gilmore of Ross and Robert D. Weinmann of Lucas Valley.

It is a first try for public office for both Gilmore and Weinmann, both of whom represent those who contend that Assemblyman Bagley is not a "real Republican."

Of more importance — to Republicans and to others also — is whether Bagley is a real representative of the Seventh Assembly District. His 12 years in the Legislature have produced ample evidence on which to judge that.

WITHOUT GOING into previous years, a look at Bagley's record during the 1971 regular and extraordinary sessions pretty well tells the story.

On matters of acute local interest, Bagley was on the job. He introduced and pushed through a bill to exempt Tamalpais High School District from having to hold another expensive and quite obviously fruitless unification election this year. He introduced — but was unable to get out of committee — a measure to eliminate the two northernmost counties from the Golden Gate Bridge District and give Marin a bigger vote in that district's government.

He pushed through a bill that will simplify solution of a long dispute between San Rafael and the state over the boundaries of the San Rafael Canal, and another calling for state reimbursement of $750,000 of the costs of the Angela Davis and Ruchell Magee trials. He was unsuccessful in trying to get the state to share cost of a Stinson Beach sewer system because of Stinson Beach State Park.

ON MATTERS of more than local interest, Bagley played his usual important role in the Legislature. The tax bill finally passed by the extraordinary session was his bill. Incidentally, it earmarks funds for acquiring state beach and park lands.

Bagley also got through a bill exempting from property tax land purchased by conservation groups for parks and open space. And provisions of his bill to prevent sale of stale dairy products were in incorporated into a measure that became law.

For youth, he was the first to introduce a proposed constitutional amendment to give the vote to 18-year-olds — although that adopted was by other authors.

The Bagley bill that created the most controversy — and was responsible for Weinmann's entrance against him — was his "busing bill" which requires school districts to draw up plans for balancing races in all schools, districtwide. Necessity for the bill is questionable. However, it does not — as some of his opponents keep claiming — have anything to do with inter-district busing for integration purposes.

ON THE RECORD Bagley appears to have represented the wide spectrum of Republicans (and Democrats too). We see no reason to reject him for either of his opponents.

We confidently expect Bill Bagley to again be the Republicans' nominee. And we hope he is.

POLLUTION IN SMOG STAFF

New Row Pits Callaghan Against Clerk To Board

By PAUL E. PETERZELL

If the Bay Area Air Pollution Control District's top administrator, D. J. Callaghan, spent as much time fighting air pollution as he does fighting his staff, the region would have a lot cleaner air.

Even a strong man like Callaghan seems too hard pressed to fight effectively on both fronts.

His newest target is the capable minutes clerk to the board of directors, advisory council and hearing board, Mabel Harder. A district employee for 13 years, she has been in her key position for nine years.

Now Callaghan wants to demote her by replacing her as clerk to the directors and advisory council.

MISS HARDER'S efficiency and speed are legendary around district offices. She performs to the clear satisfaction of board and council members, and does so graciously and with no show of strain.

Mere competence, however, apparently counts less than loyalty to Callaghan.

Miss Harder, for example, has a bad habit of recording minutes accurately. What is worse, she has an aversion to editing them to suit someone else's "memory" of what he feels actually was said.

Callaghan reportedly is less than appreciative when Miss Harder proves unwilling to edit her minutes to suit his memory. Memory can be selective, especially when it comes to the many controversial matters swirling about the district.

THE FIRST INKLING that Callaghan was moving against her reportedly came when two of the three hearing board members told Miss Harder the third member had suggested dropping her.

Callaghan also has refused to respond to Miss Harder's request for clerical help, despite the fact her workload has almost doubled in the past year.

The workload probably would have forced a weaker person to quit, but she instead turned last week to the board of directors. A change in her position, he said in a letter to the board, would be contrary to the board's policy that no major personnel change be made pending completion this summer of a management study of the district.

She noted that Callaghan's refusal to give her help has forced her to work week ends on minutes and to arrange for their transcriptions outside the office at her own expense.

MISS HARDER concluded with a pointed observation: "It would seem that during these rather difficult times that the board would best be served by someone who has had experience in its meetings."

Just one example of the district's performance outside its spectacular personnel battles has been its stalling on conversion of its own vehicles to use clean-burning liquid petroleum gas. Authorized last summer by district directors, the conversion still is pending for the first four of some 80 vehicles in the fleet.

Speeding Arrests Needed In Larkspur

This is in reply to your letter in the I-J on May 3 about the law enforcement being overdone in Larkspur.

As a resident living on the main thoroughfare in Larkspur for over eight years, I can only thank and commend the Larkspur polica force for protecting its citizens and holding down the many speeding motorists, who, no doubt, all have a different excuse for their unlawful actions.

I would invite anyone to stand on our doorstep and count the speeding cars as they approach the center of the town and to see how difficult it is for us to even get out of our garages.

Many thanks and more power to our police department who are doing an excellent job!

MMWD Board Rapped For Spurning Question

I attended my first board meeting of the Marin Municipal Water District April 26 and was dismayed at the contempt this board seems to hold for the public.

Dr. Ronald Stafford (a candidate from Division 5 of the MMWD — Sausalito, Marin City, Tamalpais Valley, Tiburon and Belvedere) asked a ressonable question concerning a new intertie with North Marin. The question had been prompted by a statement by direcotr Jordan Martinelli that we might only be assured of surplus water from the connection for a few years. Why then build a $2.7 million pipeline, if it is only going to furnish us with supplemental water for a short time?

Chairman Robert Andersoc (whose son is running against Dr. Stafford to fill the seat which Anderson Sr. will vacate in June) not only refused to answer the question but took the opportunity to accuse Dr. Stafford of taking advantage of the board. A simple yes or no answer to the question could have sufficed — either a guaranteed water supply exists or it does not.

The first item on the MMWD agenda is public discussion. Does this not mean all the public — including candidates for director of the water district? Or does the chairman have the right to censor questions from his son's opponent? If anyone is taking advantage of the board, it is Mr. Anderson.

FRAN CREBASSA
Tamalpais Valley.

Civic Center Should Be Place For Business

Re: Liquor license at Civic Center.

In the first place, the question should never have come up. There is no good reason why the Civic Center Cafeteria should serve beer and wine. The mere fact that this is a public business rather than private business does not alter the situation. The arguments voiced at the last hearing were almost too ridiculous to repeat! Sheriff Mountanos's feeling that the sanctity and dignity of the courts would be violated if the liquor was served in the legal wing of the administrative building but not if the same drinks were served in the administrative wing less than a block away and Supervisor Baptiste's suggesting that to allow drinking in the cafeteria would reduce law enforcement problems which would arise if the same people had to drive to nearby restaurants and back.

Sex and alcohol are things to be enjoyed away from our place of business. These pleasurable pursuits detract from business and since the Civic Center is a place of business, we, as taxpayers, will not have liquor sold in our cafeteria.

EDWARD W. MILLER, M.D.
San Rafael.

Foster Homes Needed For Abandoned Children

A recent article in the I-J mentioned that a young child who was without parents was lodged in Juvenile Hall overnight. I wish to correct this statement to the general public and to the personnel at the I-J. No child, abandoned, neglected, lost or falling into any other category other than breaking the law is ever taken to Juvenile Hall for housing in Marin County.

Children in Marin County are taken to foster homes (receiving homes) licensed by the State of California through the Department of Social Services who are on call 24 hours a day to prevent children who have not broken the law being taken to Juvenile Hall. There are three such homes in Marin County and other foster homes are on an emergency basis when the three receiving homes are full.

There is a shortage of foster homes in Marin County, particularily homes that will take older children and the receiving homes are filled to capacity at this time. The child mentioned above was placed in an emergency foster home until such a time as relatives can be located or permanent foster care can be provided.

Anyone wishing more information about foster care may call the Marin County Department of Social Services.

MRS. EVA MASSIE
San Rafael.

Property Value Figure Misleading

In a recent mailing a politician stated that, in California non-homeowner property (i.e. commercial property) pays 65 per cent of the property tax, apparently to create the impression that any legislation to limit property taxes would be mainly for the benefit of owners of commercial property.

On Monday, May 1, I went to Sacramento and learned at a hearing by the Assembly Committee for Taxation and Revenue that this is not so. And that the 1966 census of Governments, published by the Bureau of the Census of United States, Department of Commerce, reports on page 35 that the gross value of local assessed commercial and industrial property for the entire state of California was 23 per cent of the total of all taxable real property in the state.

In 1970-71 Los Angeles County figures on the same subject substantiates these Bureau of Census figures.

In view of the wide dissemination of "grossly inaccurate" information and the wide digression from the facts I ask that you publish the above.

WILLARD R. VOORHEES
Kentfield

(The two figures appear contradictory, but are not necessarily so. Non-homeowner property includes all rental property, not merely commercial and industrial. — Editor)

Humphrey Is On Third Base, May Be Thrown Out At Plate

WHO'S ON THIRD? All three of the leading Democratic candidates are on base: Wallace on first, McGovern on second, and Humphrey on third — with Teddy Kennedy still on the bench.

The results of the latest primaries strengthen each of the top candidates. Humphrey gained most but not enough to open a significant lead over McGovern.

In Ohio, Senator McGovern showed that he could get a substantial labor vote, and in Indiana, Wallace proved that he is far more than a regional candidate.

WALLACE CANNOT BE IGNORED. He will not get the nomination and he will be nobody's running mate. But he will be a force at the convention and McGovern is already busy courting his supporters.

Wallace's views on busing, tax reform and welfare will find some expression in the platform.

ABOUT J. EDGAR HOOVER. Three things not widely known: At the start of World War II, F.D.R. asked Hoover to take over worldwide intelligence gathering. He advised against it.

Hoover always opposed outlawing the Communist Party. He also never wanted the FBI to absorb the police powers of the states.

THINGS TO COME. Federal approval of the long-debated Alaskan pipeline is expected soon. The project: a four-foot conduit carrying four billion barrels of oil per day for 789 miles across Alaska and costing $2.7 billion.

When Interior Sec. Rogers Morton announces his decision, he will cite three advantages: The oil is urgently needed; it will avert a price rise and may well reduce prices so that an average family user can save as much as $23 a year. The environmentalists will renew their opposition.

BONN'S GOVERNMENTAL CRISIS WANES. The attempt by the conservative opposition to overthrow the Brandt government is backfiring. West German public opinion is rallying behind Chancellor Willy Brandt despite setbacks in two recent bi-elections. There is now a better prospect that the treaty of friendship and nonaggression with Russia and Poland will be ratified.

U.S. CORRESPONDENTS BEWARE. American reporters wanting to get into China will need to be wary of efforts to compromise their independence.

The reason: Reporters of two leading Japanese newspapers have been informed by Peking that they can remain in China only on assurance they will write nothing "hostile," which means nothing critical of the regime.

CHINA TURNING TO ENGLISH LANGUAGE. The Peking Foreign Language Institute is resuming instruction for the first time since it was closed by the turmoil of the Cultural Revolution.

It will teach English, French, German, Arabic and Spanish. English is now foremost in demand. Russian is not being taught at all.

TRADE WITH CHINE UNPROMISING. China's internal trade is growing slightly but is still minute. Latest figures show that China's share of total world trade is .7 of one per cent.

Thus, China's trade is less than Hong Kong's total trade, half of Australia's and 11 per cent of Japan's.

On a per capita basis, the smallness of China's trade is even more striking. In value it amounts to $5 per capita, compared to India's $7 per capita, Japan's $369, Australia's $789, and Hong Kong's $1,355.

MASS TRANSIT VS. THE AUTOMOBILE. Congestion and pollution are driving more cars off city streets. The time may be near when more people will be saying: We are driving less and enjoying it more.

Already several large cities — Washington, D.C., Atlanta, Rome, Tokyo — are taking steps to reduce the level of private automobile traffic. Atlanta is cutting its bus fares from 40 cents to 25 cents and Rome is providing free bus travel during rush hours on weekdays. The District of Columbia approach is to consider a 50-cent-a-day parking tax in all downtown garages.

Many cities, such as Chicago, Denver, Los Angeles and New York, can meet antipollution standards only by curbing automobile traffic.

Legalizing Pot Will Become Issue In California Primary

WASHINGTON — Soon the primary season will migrate westward beyond the great American heartland, past the states where each of the candidates has strained toward the center of the party — whether the "progressive center" as Hubert Humphrey calls his constituency, or the "new center," as George McGovern names his target. It will cross the Rockies and alight on the Pacific shore, where California is the ultimate bonanza and the Democratic Party is a radically less domesticated breed of voters.

Once it gets there, we can pretty accurately gauge the candidates' confidence in themselves by whether they readjust their public thinking on a single issue they have all been happy to avoid in middle America: pot.

EUGENE McCARTHY and Shirley Chisholm, the only two presidential candidates who came out flatly for legalizing marijuana, were lost long ago among the also-rans. The major survivors in the Democratic competition have stood firmly on a no-but position, at least while the primaries were being run in the South and East, where conservative attitudes on dope prevail.

McGovern, this year's successor to McCarthy as the main idol of the youth vote, screamed foul nevertheless when he was misquoted as favoring legalization. What he said, McGovern explained, was that if and when pot is legalized, it might be regulated as alcohol sales are now. He added, however, that he thought nobody should ba sent to jail for merely possessing or using it.

In other words, he is not for outright legalization, but he is for cutting back penalties for possession and use. And that is approximately where Hubert Humphrey also stands, as of this week.

What may not yet have come to the attention of the two senators while they were so busy in the Middlewest is an event that took place in San Francisco the day before the voting in Ohio and Indiana. You can bet the California organizations laying the groundwork for next month's primary paid strict attention, however.

IN SAN FRANCISCO, supporters of an initiative to place legalization of pot on the state ballot in November turned in 319,000 voter signatures to officials. By the deadline six weeks from now, they intend to have a total of 600,000. Even in the biggest state in the union, and even allowing for a high rate of invalid signatures, that is a lot of voters.

It expresses not only interest in the issue on the part of the signers, but also organizational talent in the groups that gathered their signatures. When a recall drive against Gov. Ronald Reagan was attempted before his re-election to a second term, it fell short of enough signatures, despite the varied opposition to him. It was too varied to be efficiently organized.

Pot, however, is an issue that turns many young voters on. The newly eligible 18-to-21-year-olds, plus others up to 30 who have never felt any incentive to register to vote before. Knowing this, organizers in Arizona, Alaska, Oregon and Washington, as well as California, are using marijuana legalization initiatives as a gimmick to get first-time voters onto the registration rolls. Once there, of course, they are eligible to vote on every other issue and office on the ballot.

THE ENERGY and enthusiasm of California's mass student population is bound to be stirred this spring and fall, therefore, more than in previous elections. While the marijuana question itself will not be on the June 6 ballot, it is certain to be put to the candidates on that ballot with increasing insistence.

McGovern will arrive in California as the preferred presidential candidate of most youthful voters. He may assume that since he already has the backing of most of that age group, he need not shade his stated position on pot any further to attract more.

Humphrey, starting behind his main challenger among first-time voters, has more to lose and less to gain by sliding toward a more tolerant stand on pot.

Must We All Spoil Nature In Race To 'Get Back To It'?

The Christian Science Monitor News Service

Mary McCarthy once wrote a short story titled "The Hounds of Summer" — rather brilliant, rather annoying. In other words, rather Mary McCarthyish. It is about what might be called the decline and fall of a vacation colony. The setting, "a little fishing village," happends to be in Italy, but it could be Provincetown or Carmel, say, 50 years ago.

The original summer colonist — a child psychologist, a UN official, a history professor, a labor lawyer, an editor — are bright, charming people with bright, charming children. They swim, they picnic, they roam their little Eden with the assurance of the elect.

Then others come. They are a little less bright, a little less charming, and so are their children.

"EVERYBODY WANTS to go to a place no one knows about," Miss McCarthy observes, laying down the first law of vacation resorts.

All you have to do to spoil a place is to advertise its reputation for being "unspoiled," and this happens to Miss McCarthy's Porto Quaglia. As usual, the natives do nothing to save their village from tourism. On the contrary, Miss McCarthy practically defines a native as one "whose whole interest lay in having his birthplace spoiled as fast as possible."

All vacation colonies get spoiled the same way. You read decline and fall in the landscape: candy wrappers, ice cream cups, crumpled cans, broken bottles, old tires, watermelon rinds.

MISS McCARTHY'S nasty point is that even with the original tourists, who snobbishyly think of themselves as no tourists at all, Nature is being greedily bought and sold. At the moment the sunset over the bay is treated as a commodity the decline and fall of a vacation colony is on its way.

Those sunsets over the bay are rare items everywhere these days. Nature has become a marketplace of diminishing supply and rising demand. The gum wrappers, the plastic potato chip bags, the dumped ash trays are rapidly moving up what used to back roads.

It is May, with the prime vacation time, July, still two months off. Yet the prudent, the far-sighted 1972 vacationer made his plans — in fact, his deposit — as far back as 1971.

One can't even get to Nature without a reservation. Campers in the state forests and national parks must line up for their patch of tenting grounds like city dwellers putting their name on the list for a choice apartment.

Sheer numbers are the enemy of the vacation colony. The vacation used to be the prerogative of the priviliged. The average man stayed home for his two weeks. For a big deal he went to a couple of ball games and Coney Island, or the local equivalent. Today almost everybody can afford to "get away" — and does — for what, incidentally, has become a month.

DESPITE THE SOBERED economy, the market for Nature — for the acre or two in the woods and the A-frame — is booming. Evidently the more Nature disappears, the more hunger there is for it. Like Daniel Boones, we all pile into the station wagons and get into rural traffic jams on the superhighways that now take us back to nature via hamburger joints and pizza stands.

The cycle is all to visibly self-defeating. If anybody really wanted to be alone, he would stay at home.

The need for space, for privacy — for Nature — is a reasonable need. Why shouldn't we, in our sublime inconsistency, be allowed to play part-time Thoreau? But where? Porto Quaglia? Carmel? Provincetown?

In "Cape Cod" Thoreau wrote of walking toward Provincetown. "It is plain for miles," he reported — only the masts of sailing vessels to prove it was not primeval wilderness. "That solitude," he concludes, "was sweet to me as a flower."

How Thoreau's ghost must haunt the mid-Cape highway on the 4th of July! If, that is, even a ghost can find room.

"DECENTRALIZATION!" is the cry from the heart these days, and perhaps the slogan should be applied to vacations as well. Must people take vacations in the off season — Cape Cod in the winter, Florida in the summer? Should everybody from Oregon go to Michigan and vice versa? Synchronize watches — everybody shift.

The solution obviously is not simple. But the mob scenes on the ski slopes and the beaches are a contradiction too cruel to endure. If nothing is done, by 1984 getting away may be mostly a matter of getting away from other people getting away.

Park Site Contract To Be Studied

A contract for purchase of a 441-acre park site in the lower Gallinas Valley will be considered tomorrow by the Marin County Board of Supervisors.

The site, designated as the North Bay Front Park, has been sought for years by county park officials.

Located south of Hamilton Air Force Base, the parcel is envisioned as someday having a recreational boat harbor, among other amenities. Of the 441 acres, about 300 acres are behind dikes.

Terms of the proposed contract have not been disclosed, but the county's capital improvement program lists $1.5 million for acquisition of the park lands. An additional $400,000 is listed for development.

The capital improvement program shows $925,000 in federal and state funds for the park, leaving the remaining $975,000 to be paid through local taxes.

The board will begin its session at 9 a.m., with discussion on the proposed contract slated for about 3 p.m.

The board of supervisors agenda also includes:

NATIONAL PARK — A proposal that the Village of Olema be recommended for inclusion in the proposed Golden Gate National Recreation Area. Action on the proposal was continued last week to allow residents of the tiny community to respond.

CABINS — A request that the board support state legislation to revoke private leases on about eight state-owned cabins at Steep Ravine Canyon in Tamalpais State Park. The cabins were leased some years ago to what have been described as prestigious Bay Area families.

Comedian Carlin Brings Insight And Irreverence

George Carlin, one of America's funniest comedians, gave two performances last night at the Veterans Memorial Building. The earlier show at 7 p.m. attracted a large audience of well-dressed high school students who followed Carlin's odyssey of humor every step of the way.

(The later performance was given at 10 p.m.)

Carlin, a 34-year-old native of New York City, gave a performance that was casual and sparkling with insight into the human condition.

With his long hair, flowing beard, T-shirt and blue jeans, Carlin sets a mood of irreverence. That irreverence is the sting to his act.

He works on many levels. He is, at once, a jester, monologist, improviser and dealer in concepts. He uses his body to clown and his mind to philosophize.

After a long warmup of stream of conscious play, Carlin began the routines that have become known through his many television appearances, particularly through his spots on the Flip Wilson show.

He said, "I like to warm up to my job." He seemed self-conscious about doing his bits and prolonged the improvisation for a good half hour. He said "Stick with me and we'll swing."

And he swung. The first routine was the "Class Clown," and how he got started as a comedian. He said a class clown was having a good day when he made a girl throw up.

"Cracking your knuckles is a good way to make girls sick," said Carlin.

Carlin spiced the bit with anecdotes of growing up in New York. "The only birds we had were pigeons and sparrows. You could never get near sparrows because they flew away as soon as you approached. But pigeons would walk by you and give you a filthy look."

Carlin said, "Poor pigeons they have their song stuck in their throat. That's what city life will do to you."

His second routine was the "11 O'Clock Report." Here he uses two of his best characters, Biff Barf — the sportscaster and Al Sleet — the "hippy-dippy weather man."

Carlin writes all of his own material and this is some of his best. His news starts off, "Good evening. It's 8 p.m. in San Francisco, 9 p.m. in Chicago, 10 p.m. in New York and 4:42 in Newark.

"Some of the top news stories: Good humor man slays 10; Pen pal stabs pal with pen; and a California mathematics professor was was awarded the Nobel Prize in mathematics for discovering the number bleen, which goes between six and seven."

Biff Barf reported a partial score, "Stanford - 29" and Al Sleet gave the weather, "Tonight's forecast is dark, turning partly light in the morning."

The anchorman says "Al's been into the mushrooms again."

He ended the first show with a long bit oc drugs.

Carlin says the drug problem is everyone's, instilled at an early age with the concept of taking something when you feel bad.

He says "It starts with St. Joseph's Aspirin. Everyone thinks it's okay because it's St. Joseph's."

Of his own experience, Carlin said, "When I was young I took bennies. They sounded so friendly, like a cousin."

By the time Carlin had ended his 90 minutes, one had the feeling that he had indeed done his job: He made people laugh and at the same time made them think about their world.

ART REVIEW

Potter's Etching, Oil, Ink Shown

By LAURA DEVENDORF

Ken Potter is a recognized watercolorist of long standing. And there are several nice examples of his style among the works he has displayed this month at the Ross Valley Clinic, 1350 South Eliseo Drive, Greenbrae.

A neat, sparse rendition of a boat moored behind a row of chunky brown pilings, and a crazy quilt view of San Francisco buildings cut recklessly in the foreground by a leaning telephone pole and wires, are two of the better ones.

Potter's abilities do not end here. He knows how to do a lot of things and in this show he includes examples of them all. Some of the most engrossing are his etchings, such as one of Picasso-like females and fish, and another of fishermen, poles, sails and such put together in a compactly interesting way.

Potter also does abstract oils in several styles, silkscreen and stained glass. He works in ink, as in a startlingly strange, half-mechanical woman.

He takes photographs and sets them up in a ring of colored cardboard, the open top of which, he stuffs with tissue paper. And he sculpts.

The central setting and the openness of the clinic's exhibition area lends itself particularly to Potter's wood, metal and resin sculpture. It is easy to move all around his carved fish shape hung over wood pilings and to appreciate the face appearing in profile on a post with holes and bolts. And light pours through bicycle heels which Potter has filled with stones, marbles and colored chips cast in clear resin, and then grouped like a huge flower and suspended from the ceiling.

Metals appear in much of Potter's sculpture including a self-portrait in which half the head is done realistically and half erupts wire. There are several cast pieces, some of them quite large, such as a bullet-shaped dome of polished metal, its front opened up and filled with dark, decaying prongs which look like a mouth in very serious need of a dentist.

Obviously, quite a bit of skill and an awesome amount of work is necessary to accomplish so many techniques and not have them look amateurish. Potter knows many facets of art. But that is also where the trouble lies. He goes on too many tangents ever to say anything very meaningful in any of them. His things are like exercizes, all of them competent, pleasant and also superficial. And you feel shortchanged.

Anyone with Potter's ability would give us so much more if he let himself go deeply into just a few styles or media, if he'd take some real risks and say something only he can say through them.

The council will also formally accept the resignation of Fire Chief Roscoe A. Benton, and is expected to name Joseph Elwood as his successor.

The council will also get a report on the structural condition of the Christian Church which it recently purchased. It has been suggested for use as both a museum of Petaluma history and as an art gallery.

Everyone Stands Out At Youth Orchestra Concert

By ROBERT M. NESS

Is the Marin Youth Orchestra the greatest youth orchestra in the country? It was not difficult to believe at the final concert of its 18th season yesterday afternoon at the Marin Veterans' Memorial Building in San Rafael.

While the opening triple brass choir, the piano concerto by Mozart, and the "Songs of Separation" by Will Grant Still were all superb by both soloists and orchestra, it was the concluding Symphony No. 5 by Shostakovich that placed conductor Hugo Rinaldi and this amazing orchestra in a league by themselves.

The Fifth is a monumental symphonic work, much more so than Shostakovich's later symphonic works. Its four movements encompass a sea of emotions — tragic, joyous, dramatic, and lyrical.

Every detail of the score was carefully realized to near perfection by Rinaldi, and his orchestra responded to him with a breadth and understanding of the whole that was overwhelming in its fluidity.

The third movement was the crowning achievement. An extremely sustained and darkly tragic largo movement, it relies on extra-human, expressive patience for its realization. The dynamic and tragic conclusion was the sum of the succeeding parts — all perfect in their perspective.

Solo passages for clarinet, oboe, flute, bassoon, trumpet, and horn form a continuous mosaic pattern throughout this symphony. Here Rinaldi's cuing was beautiful. His motions animated an invitation to "do your own expressive thing." The result was astounding. Each performer rose to the occasion with exceptional finesse and artistry. For sheer musical power, the concluding Allegro non Troppo had the dynamic and dramatic force of a Philadelphia orchestra.

Although early baroque composer Jacobus Gallus's "Alleluia" for triple brass choir was performed well, it suffered acoustically. The hall soaks up sound, and baroque brass choir music needs the opposite acoustical situation, even to the point of echoing.

Pianist Elizabeth Wheeler performed the Allegro from Mozart's A major piano concerto with exceptional maturity. Each phrase was carefully constructed and rhythmically articulated. Tone quality was exceptional throughout. Every note was crystal clear, never harsh nor unbalanced against the overall texture.

As well as being a violinist of considerable merit, soprano Lue Ann Fisher is an extraordinary vocalist. Her performance of the dramatically poignant "Songs of Separation" by Still left the audience spellbound. Although the physical output of sound is still limited by her years, her control of color and mastery of vocal technic are truly magical. Miss Fisher, by all standards, has a brilliant musical future.

While 400-plus is a respectable audience, there were still 1,200 empty seats at yesterday's performance. There are, admittedly, innumerable wonderful musical happenings in Marin County every week, but none could be more gratifying to Marin residents than its own youth orchestra.

You can hear how much so on May 27 at 9 a.m. on radio station KKHI when yesterday's program will be broadcast.

60 Jailed In War Protest

BOSTON (UPI)—Police today arrested 60 antiwar demonstrators trying to block entrances to the John F. Kennedy Federal Building. There was no violence.

About 900 protesters gathered in front of the office building in Government Center after a half mile march through downtown streets from Boston Common.

A spokesman for the General Services Administration said employes were "having no difficulty getting to work."

The 60 protesters were taken to jail where they were booked on charges of disturbing the peace and blocking entrances to the building."

POLE SHATTERED IN PREDAWN WRECK: WOMAN TRAPPED

Judith Steele, wife of the president of the San Rafael Junior Chamber of Commerce, James Irwin Steele, was trapped, badly injured, for more than an hour yesterday in their wrecked car (left photo). Steele (center photo) was assisted to an ambulance by an unidentified officer and Sgt. Charles Brobeck of the San Rafael Police Department, while others worked (right photo) to extricate his wife. Also injured in the accident at 3:25 a.m. were Steele's other passengers, Mr. and Mrs. James W. Tait of 32 Maple Avenue, Kentfield. Mrs. Steele was reported in satisfactory condition today at Kaiser Foundation Hospital in San Francisco, with a fractured skull and pelvis, and scalp cuts. Steele was reported in good condition with a back injury at Kaiser's San Rafael hospital, where Mrs. Tait, 28, was reported in good condition despite a broken collar bone and cut left cheek. Police said Tait also was injured, but the hospital had no record of treating him. Police said Steele, who lives at 18 Leafwood Circle lost control of the car which broke three small trees before hitting the pole at 1927 Fifth Avenue. Power was not affected by the accident.

$73-MILLION PROPOSAL

Regional Sewer Plan Prepared

By FRANK FARRARA

A subregional sewer program covering Northeast Marin and the Petaluma and Sonoma watersheds, estimated to cost $73 million in three phases, is recommended by three engineering firms.

The program would provide a subregional outfall line into Central San Francisco Bay from Point San Pedro, a reclamation system that could create a lake near Lakeville or in Chileno Valley and, eventually, reuse of waste water.

The report covering 620 square miles with a population of 116,000 is being prepared for seven governmental agencies as requested by the Regional Water Quality Control Board.

It doesn't cover the method of financing or division of costs or the administration of the program, reported Carles A. Joseph, manager of the Novato Sanitary District and chairman of the technical committee for the agencies involved.

Under the program Phase One, estimated to cost $33 million, would include three treatment plants Sonoma Valley, Petaluma and near Hamilton Air Force Base, with a common outfall line to the central Bay from Point San Pedro. The completion date is 1977 and about 75 per cent federal and state financing would be expected.

Such a system would be in keeping with the State Water Resources Control Board's Bay-Delta plan to have disposal in the Central Bay, Joseph said.

The proposed treatment plant near Hamilton Air Force Base would serve the area now served by Novato, Ignacio, Hamilton and Las Gallinas Valley treatment plants, he explained.

Phase Two would be a reclamation program, estimated to cost $26 million, which could be achieved by 1985. A large lake could be created east of Lakeville or in Chileno Valley, and water would be available for irrigation, Joseph said. "The majority of the system could be used," but a reclamation plant, estimated to cost $18 million, would be in the vicinity of Lakeville.

Phase three, 1985-1990, estimated to cost $14 million, would provide for reuse of waste water, through a higher degree of water treatment.

Joseph said this wouldn't be undertaken unless a market developed for the water, and a high volume market would be necessary. One possibility would be municipal reuse with the water put "back in the water system," he said. Another potential use would be to export water to the Delta area for agriculture or for "flushing" through the Delta.

While population projections for the area involved have fluctuated from 321,000 to 425,000 by the year 2000, Joseph said the engineers want to plan a system to "accommodate what planners think is appropriate."

A summary of the preliminary report will be presented to the Novato Sanitary District Board at 7 p.m. today, and it will be "two to three months" before a full preliminary report is submitted, Joseph said.

"Then it will be another two to three months before a final report," he said. A study of the financing will require "another five to six months."

Joseph explained that the engineers felt it best to present the summary reports now and get some comment from the agencies rather than wait until a fully detailed report was ready.

Agencies participating in the study are the Novato Sanitary District, Sonoma Valley Sanitation District, Sonoma County, Petaluma, Hamilton Air Force Base, Las Gallinas Valley Sanitary District and San Rafael Sanitation District.

In the San Rafael Sanitation District, the only sector involved would be "Marin Bay service area," generally the Peacock Gap area.

The firms conducting the study are J. Warren Nute Inc. of San Rafael, Jenks and Adamson of Palo Alto and Yoder, Trotter Orlob and Associates of Walnut Creek.

The preliminary summary will be presented to the Las Gallinas Valley Sanitary District board at 7:30 p.m. tomorrow at the district office, 300 Smith Ranch Road.

City-County Urban Growth Discussed

I-J Special Report

SANTA ROSA — Sonoma County city officials Saturday heard a plea for cooperation with the county in regulating growth, but most remained skeptical about a joint effort since none of the supervisors attended.

The officials were obviously irked that none of the supervisors attended the second quarterly city-county informational congress. Board chairman Henry Spomer appeared before the meeting at Los Robles Lodge to explain he had another meeting to attend. Ignazio A. Vella of Sonoma arrived in time only for lunch.

Petaluma Mayor Helen Putnam, meeting chairman, said she was disappointed that no one came to discuss the North Coast Regional Planning and Development Commission which had been one of the major items on the agenda of the all-day meeting.

Santa Rosa city councilman Gregory Jones was more critical saying, "we talk about a master plan of cooperation and no supervisors are there. I'm getting damned impatient at the whole thing."

Lawrence Andrew, executive officer of the Sonoma County Local Agency Formation Commission, explained the proposal sor cities to set "spheres of influence" and growth boundaries to cope with the urban influx hitting Sonoma.

He said the proposal should particularly assist Petaluma and Santa Rosa where city councils have already set policies to control growth.

Petaluma planning director William C. McGivern said the planning commission within several weeks will place an urban ring around Petaluma, setting growth limits for the next five years. He said the line would be fixed and based on actual property lines rather than a "floating" line. "That line will be held sacred for five years," McGivern said.

Mrs. Putnam warned that unless the county cooperates with cities in regulating growth the plan will be an exercise in futility.

Recreational Events Listed

Classes in water exercise, swimming, tennis, belly dancing and arts and crafts, sponsored by the Terra Linda Recreation-Park District, will be held beginning this week and next, all at the community center.

The swimming and water exercise classes will be held beginning May 15 at the Terra Linda Community Center pool. Tennis classes for ladies will be held on Tuesdays beginning this week.

Classes in music and arts and crafts for preschool children will be held beginning May 19. Belly dancing classes will be held in two sessions May 22 and May 25, and arts and crafts classes will begin Thursday. Times, registration deadlines and prices may be obtained by calling the center.

School Board In Closed Session

The San Anselmo School District board held a closed meeting at noon yesterday to discuss candidates for superintendent, said Franklin C. Latcham, board president.

"We had seven candidates, but one has withdrawn, leaving six," he said. He said that the board members would probably visit the districts of the candidates before making a final decision.

The board meets at 7:30 p.m. tomorrow at the Red Hill School library.

Six Injured As Two Cars Collide

Six Marin County residents were injured at 12:25 a.m. Saturday in a head-on collision on Nicasio Valley Road, south of Lucas Valley Road, the California Highway Patrol reported today.

The driver of one car, Harold E. Slater, 21,of Devil's Gulch, Nicasio, was reported in satisfactory condition at Marin General Hospital with rib injuries. His passenger, Carol Baker, 25, of Devil's Gulch, Nicasio, was treated for a cut forehead.

The driver of the other car, Mario Molino, 16, of 123 Kent Avenue, Kentfield, suffered an injured hand and leg and was reported in satisfactory condition at the same hospital. One passenger in Molino's car, Andrew Goldstein, 18, of 2 Neane Street, San Rafael, was treated for a bruised chest.

According to the highway patrol, the other two passengers in Molino's car, Penny Spaan, 17, of 85 Corte Patensio, Greenbrae, and Robert Andrews, 18, of 527 Fourth Street, San Rafael, were taken to Marin General Hospital, but the hospital has no record of their arrival.

According to the highway patrol, Molino's car crossed the center line and struck the car driven by Slater.

Fraser Elected To Smog District Board

Sausalito City Councilman Stephen A. Fraser today was elected to represent Marin's cities on the Bay Area Air Pollution Control District board of directors.

He will replace former Sausalito City Councilman Wyman Hicks, whose term on the smog board expires May 31.

Fraser was elected at a special three-minute meeting of mayors in the Marin Civic Center. He defeated the only other nominee, Dr. Marin G. Blinder, a San Anselmo city councilman, 7-1.

Voting for Fraser were mayors or their delegates from Mill Valley, Tiburon, San Rafael, Fairfax, Larkspur, Ross and Corte Madera. Only San Anselmo Mayor Warren Perry voted for Blinder.

No one was present to represent Novato, Belvedere or Sausalito.

Fraser, a planner, was endorsed by Hicks in letters to each mayor. Hicks served the past two years, but was ineligible to serve again.

Both Fraser and Blinder were last-minute candidates for the smog board. Former San Anselmo City Councilman James F. Reed III had been in line to replace Hicks, but lost his city seat in last month's election.

Fairfax Resident Injured In Crash

Robert Aganowski, 17, of 67 Porteous Avenue, Fairfax, suffered a bruised and sprained left knee yesterday when his car crashed into a fire hydrant at Sir Francis Drake Boulevard and Butterfield Road, according to San Anselmo police.

Aganowski's car knocked over the hydrant, sending out a spray of water, officers said. Aganowski, who was traveling east on Sir Francis Drake Boulevard, according to police, said his brakes failed. He was treated at Marin General Hospital.

In Some Defensive Situations Let Aging Improve Trumps

Old wine is wholesomest, old pippins toothsomest, old wood burns brightest, old soldiers and sweethearts are surest — and old trumps sometimes take more tricks. In a certain kind of defensive situation, let your trumps improve with age.

JACK WINS TRICK

West opened the ten of jiamonds, and East overtook with the jack to win the trick. (Declarer didn't cover with dummy's queen since he hoped that West had led a singleton and that East would fail to overtake.)

East continued with the king of diamonds and then led the ace. This put South's trumps in the middle.

South ruffed with the queen of hearts, and West smugly overruffed with the king. West then looked around for something bright to do, but he had already muffed his one chance.

WON'T RUN AWAY

There is no need to overruff in this position. The king of trumps won't run away. West can afford to let declarer win the third trick with the queen of hearts.

This causes South to waste a high trump, while West maintains his position. Now West is sure to win a trump trick with the ten as well as with the king. South can take the ace of trumps, but then West has the king-ten behind the jack.

NO MORE PROBLEM

West lost his chance when he overruffed. South was able to draw West's two remaining trumps with the ace and the jack. Then declarer had no further problem.

Always think of this principle when you are given the chance to overruff with a sure trump trick. Unless you're in a hurry to make a particular play, sit tight. Your trump trick will be just as good later — and it may even be better.

Misdemeanor Charges Filed

Only misdemeanor charges have been filed against three persons arrested Thursday inside the locked storage yard of D and W Auto Wreckers in San Rafael.

Jerry Wayne Hurd, 21, and Zack Gaines Jr., 19, both of Santa Venetia, and Paul Thester Gill, 19, of San Rafael, were arraigned in Marin Municipal Court yesterday on charges of attempted petty theft and entering the area to vandalize.

They are to plead Friday.

Bike Rider Suffers Minor Crash Injuries

Bicycle rider Scott Campbell-Walker, 14, of 123 Oak Springs Drive, San Anselmo, suffered minor injuries at 9 a.m. Friday when his bike and a car driven by Lester M. Cox, 22, of 50 Wood Lane, Fairfax, collided.

San Anselmo police said the accident happened when the boy hit Cox's car while the motorist was making a right-hand turn from Sir Francis Drake Boulevard at Ash Avenue.

ABSOLUTE PRIVACY

is a hard thing to find these days, but here's a house that's got it, and great sun, and a nice view. The house itself is real funny. Lots of rooms, here and there, and porches and windows, all more or less in the modern manner. It needs some work, and taste, and imagination, but it has wonderful potential, if you know what you're doing. Lots of level land for outdoor living and tall trees all around. Interesting at $37,500. Lawmaker Asks To Be Counsel Of Clulchette

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Assemblyman Bill Greene said Tuesday he has informed the Adult Authority he wishes to serve as counsel to John Clutchette, one of the San Quentin Soledad Brothers, at his parole hearing Tuesday.

Greene, D-Los Angeles, said he was asked by Clutchette's mother, Mrs. Doris Maxwell of Compton, to be her son's counsel at the hearing before the authority in Sacramento.

Clutchette was recently acquitted of murder charges in the death of a San Quentin guard.

No Specific Alarm Equipment Endorsed

Salesmen who go from door to door selling fire alarm equipment supposedly "recommended" by local fire departments have received no such endorsement, according to William C. Lellis, assistant Larkspur fire chief and chairman of the fire prevention section of the Marin County Fire Chief's Association.

Lellis said that the salesmen are doing nothing illegal, because in some cases firemen's organizations have endorsed the type of alarm system, but no specific brand or model has been recommended.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. THEODORE R. VAN DELLEN

Doctors Puzzled For Century Over Anorexia Nervosa Women

More than 100 years ago, a physician published a report concerning a young woman who had lost so much weight she was skin and bones. She had been active and alert and, for no reason, began to eat like a bird. Aside from failing to menstruate, she was otherwise healthy. Most physicians have seen individuals with anorexia nervosa, but the condition is as puzzling today as it was then.

MANY of the victims have a weight phobia and are determined to become thin. In time, the fear becomes an uncontrollable obsession. They ignore all sensations of hunger and, in their pursuit of thinness, pick at their food. Now and then the sufferer goes on an eating binge which may be followed by feelings of guilt. When this takes place, she induces vomiting to accentuate the starvation. Some resort to purgatives or vigorous exercise.

ODDLY, despite their emaciated appearance, they seldom develop serious vitamin, mineral, or protein deficiencies. Apparently, they know enough about nutrition to avoid high calorie foods and carbohydrates.

Anorexia nervosa is usually triggered by emotional conflicts or stress. The most likely candidates are women under 30 who never have been married.

So much weight is lost that they are in danger of dying of starvation. As a result, the majority must be hospitalized and fed by stomach tube. Recovery may take two to three months and requires hours of firm persuasion and encouragement. Tranquilizers control their restlessness and resistance to eating. Some get better; others return to their phobia, and up to 15 per cent die of starvation or suicide.

(Questions on medical topics will be answered by mail if stamped, self-addressed envelope accompanies request to the Independent-Journal.)

SCIATICA

S. R. writes: Is there any help for sciatic rheumatism? My mother has been doctoring for this leg pain, but still has to walk the floor at night to get relief.

REPLY

Yes. Your mother ought to consult an orthopedic surgeon, because the pain may be coming from arthritis or a ruptured disk in the lower back. Meanwhile, sleeping on a firm mattress or using a bed board may lessen distress at night. Our leaflet on sciatica can be obtained by sending stamped, self-addressed envelope with request.

HEALS QUICKLY

A. T. writes: If you cut yourself and the wound heals quickly, is this a sign of good circulation?

REPLY

Yes. Clean, noninfected wounds heal quickly. Infection is discouraged by washing the lesion thoroughly with soap and water and applying a sterile bandage as soon as possible. A good circulation also helps.

NOCTURNAL SEIZURES

E. P. writes: I get epileptic spells only at night while sleeping. Do you think dreams bring on these bouts?

REPLY

No. Abnormal brain waves are responsible. You ought to be under treatment because your next attack may come on while at work, driving a car, or walking down the street.

NERVE AIDS

A. G. writes: Are sweet things bad for the nerves?

REPLY

Not unless they are blondes.

Innocent Plea To Fatal Crash

Carlos John Flores, 35, of San Francisco, has pleaded innocent in Marin Superior Court to charges stemming from a fatal auto crash on the Golden Gate Bridge last year.

A jury trial was set for the week of June 19 for Flores, who is charged with killing a motorist because of drunkenness and because his car strayed over the dividing line on the bridge.

The charges resulted from an accident Dec. 12 in which Julia May Langville, 52, of Guerneville, was killed and a Larkspur couple injured.

Alto Sewer Pipe To Be Replaced

The Alto Sanitary District has decided to hire Roto-Rooter Sewer Service to replace a decaying sewer pipe between Meadow Drive and Dorset Lane.

According to recording secretary Daniel McNeil, the project will cost the district between $750 and $1,000.

The sanitary board also discussed its preliminary budget. McNeil said total expenditures would be slightly higher than last year, but declined to release details of the budget until a public hearing is scheduled.

Guilty Plea To Reduced Charge

Ronald Lee Price, 25, of Oakland, who had been charged with a felony, has pleaded guilty in Marin Municipal Court to reduced charges of trespassing and having a flaming substance that caused a fire in a garage in San Rafael last September.

Price then was sentenced to six months in jail by Judge Peter Allen Smith with credit he has served in Atascadero State Hospital since October. He also was given three years' probation.

He is to return to court Wednesday so details of probation can be arranged.

Price turned himself in to San Rafael police following the $1,500 fire.

Stump Scare-Tactic Claim By McGovern

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Sen. George S. McGovern says his opponents were using "last minute scare tactics" in the Nebraska primary by describing as radical his views on abortion, marijuana and amnesty for Vietnam draft evaders.

McGovern, on the eve of his important battle with Sen. Hubert Humphrey, said in Omaha Sunday that abortion laws should be determined by states; drug pushers should be imprisoned instead of marijuana users and that amnesty should be granted after the Vietnam war the same as it was after the Civil War and World Wars I and II.

While McGovern went on television in Nebraska Sunday after talking with members of a predominantly black church, Humphrey shuttled between the Cornhusker state and West Virginia. Both states hold primaries Tuesday.

Alabama Gov. George C. Wallace, fresh off his third primary victory in an antibusing state, indicated he would probably run a brisk write-in campaign for the California primary June 6.

Wallace polled just over 50 per cent of the Democratic vote in North Carolina Saturday to pick up 37 delegates to the national convention at Miami Beach. Ex-Gov. Terry Sanford, Wallace's chief foe, got 27 delegates and said he would stump in New Jersey, his first out-of-state venture.

Humphrey told ethnic group leaders in Omaha that he would help make America safer from crime by hiring unemployed Vietnam veterans for jobs with police, fire and sheriffs' departments.

McGovern and Humphrey were believed running about even in Nebraska, far ahead of the other nine candidates on the Democratic ballot. It will be their first test without the factor of Sen. Edmund S. Muskie.

Lakers' Ailing Wilt Laces Hands, Knicks Enroute to Crown

Sports

Independent-Journal, 31
Monday, May 8, 1972

INGLEWOOD (UPI) — Wilt Chamberlain looked like a fighter just before they lace the gloves on.

Wearing football interior lineman's pads wrapped around both hands, the 7-foot-1 Goliath of the Los Angeles Lakers strode onto the Forum court and that was the beginning of the end for the New York Knicks.

FRUSTRATION

When the man who once scored 100 points in a single pro game was finished, the Lakers had their first National Basketball Association championship after a dozen years of frustration.

Chamberlain was expected to be on the bench—at least at the start—Sunday night because of a severely sprained right wrist, but he came through with a 24-point, 29-rebound performance that carried the Lakers to a 114-100 victory over the Knicks.

The win gave Los Angeles a 4-1 series triumph over a New York club which beat the Lakers in seven games for the league crown two years ago.

CHAMBERLAIN

A four-time winner of the NBA's Most Valuable Player award, Chamberlain was voted the outstanding player of the championship series and will receive a new car.

"This one meant a lot more than the last one," said Chamberlain, referring to the Philadelphia 76ers' 1947 title.

"That team was picked to win everything and this team was picked to win nothing."

DEMORALIZED

Chamberlain, 35, was 10 for 14 from the floor and demoralized the Knicks with his shot-blocking defense.

"I thought I could help by this afternoon," explained the 11-year pro veteran, who suffered his sprained wrist in 116110 Los Angeles overtime win at New York Friday night.

However, it wasn't until just before game time that Chamberlain was declared fit by Dr. Robert Kerlain, who had listed the Laker center as "very, very doubtful" Saturday.

EIGHTH TRIP

For the Lakers, the title came in their eighth trip to the finals since the club was moved to Los Angeles from Minneapolis in 1960.

For first-year Los Angeles coach Bill Sharman, it was his third pro crown. He coached Cleveland to a crown in 1962 in the old American Basketball League and guided the Utah Stars to the American Basketball Association title last year.

"It's been kind of a goal of mine to take three titles," admitted Sharman, who now will get a chance to rest a voice barely audible because of strained vocal cords.

For Jerry West, who scored 23 points and added nine assists, it was the end of a long road.

'UNBELIEVABLE'

"It's an unbelievable feeling, something I've always wanted to experience," said the 12-year Laker veteran, who was frustrated six times in the finals by Bill Russell and the Boston Celtics.

"It's going to be nice to smile this summer and not have to sit back and explain what happened."

Gail Goodrich led the Los Angeles scoring with 25 points, 16 of them in the second half, while second-year forward Jim McMillian added 20.

For the Knicks, Walt Frazier fired in 31 points.

The Lakers led 26-24 after one quarter and the siore was tied 53-53 at halftime. They were in front 83-78 after three quarters but the Knicks were still within five at 90-85 with 8:07 to go. The Lakers then put the game away with eight unanswered points.

33 STRAIGHT

The victory capped a season in which the Lakers won a record 69 games, reeled off a record string of 33 straight triumphs and eliminated the defending champion Milwaukee Bucks in the Western Conference finals.

Chamberlain played the last half of the regular season with a fracture of a bone in his right hand and a painful bruise on his left hand.

Red Holzman, the New York coach, called the presence of Chamberlain and a pulled muscle in the right side of Dave DeBusschere the keys in the series.

"Wilt was tough all the way," he said. "Certainly the size factor was hard for us to cope with.

"I don't know what would have happened if DeBusschere had not been hurt but we would have liked to have had everything going for us."

CLEARING HURDLE — College of Marin's Ken Blasingame flashed over a hurdle on his way to a third place finish in the 120-yard highs at Saturday's Camino Norte Conference meet in Kentfield. Blasingame, who also placed fourth in the 440-yard intermediate hurdles, was one of 10 Tars to qualify for the Northern California Junior College trials May 17 in Modesto.

MARIN BOWLING

De Young Wins Masters Meet

TERRY DE YOUNG
First Masters win

De Young went through three matches Saturday and two yesterday and won all five, defeating Elmer Tynes, a two-time Masters champion, 675-577 in the finals. De Young's other three-game scores were 686, 622, 568 and 692 for a robust 216 average for 15 games. The 692 was the high series of the tournament, held at Nave Lanes in Ignacio. It was the same house in which De Young rolled a 300 game during league play in 1968.

In the final match, De Young led off with a 258 game to Tynes' 173 and held an 82-pin lead. Turning point of that game was when De Young picked up the very difficult 6-7-8-10 split in the second frame and then strung out six straight strikes. He won the second game, 247-209 and increased the lead to 123 pins. He shot 170 in the final game to Tynes' 195.

The victory was worth $215 for De Young and $117.50 for Tynes who won the Masters in 1967 and '68. It was De Young's first time past the Masters qualifying round.

In the highest scoring match yesterday, DeYoung, who is planning to start off a real estate selling career in a few days, defeated Joe Kenney, manager of Boulevard Bowl in Petaluma, 692-667. That match came right before the final one.

Tynes, a physical education department aide at Terra Linda High School, had other series scores of 651,593,608, 662, 642 and 623 in the double-elimination tourney. Since De Young remained in the winner's bracket throughout the tourney, he had to roll only five series to Tynes' seven.

High tournament game honors went to Fred Bernardi in the playoffs, each with a 279.

Two Swim Marks Set By DeMont

Rick DeMont set a pair of varsity meet records, and Paul Cane and Spencer Eldred each added wins Saturday in the North Coast Section (NCS) Division II swimming meet, at the Walnut Creek Park and Recreation Swim Center.

DeMont of Terra Linda won the 200 and 400-yard freestyle races in times of 1:46.5 and 3:39.1, respectively. His 400 time slashed the previous division meet record by 17 seconds.

Redwood's Cane earned Marin County's other varsity first place in the 100 breaststroke, with a 1:04.2 clocking.

Eldred, also of Redwood, took a pair of Class B victories, in the 200 and 400 free (1:52.7 and 4:00.7).

McRae Wins Monterey Car Race

MONTEREY, Calif. (UPI) — New Zealander Graham McRae was $13,800 richer today and well launched into his American race driving career.

McRae entered his first U.S. race Sunday, the L&M Continental Grand Prix at Laguna Seca raceway, and sprinted to a convincing win with an average speed of 106.54 miles per hour before a crowd of 25,479.

Left close enough to be in the exhaust fumes of McRae's Leda Chevy was the 1971 L&M champion, David Hobbs of Boddington, England.

The 1.9 mile, nine turn course at Laguna Seca was scorched for two 40-lap heats by the little open cockpit Grand Prix-style cars.

McRae captured first in both heats. He edged Hobbs by just eight tenths of a second in the first race after flashing ahead in the 39th lap. He got by Hobbs' Hogan-Lola going up the hill on the first turn and streaked home the winner with an average speed of 108.10 m.p.h.

Happy Birthday For A's Manager

OAKLAND (UPI)—A's manager Dick Williams couldn't have had a finer birthday, unless it was a pennant-clincher.

Down 5-0 by the fourth, the Oakland A's battled back for a 7-5 victory over the fumbling New York Yankees Sunday to make Williams' 43rd birthday one he won't forget for some time.

Ron Blomberg, a muscular young first baseman the Yankees have great plans for, almost ruined the day singlehandedly for Williams, the A's and a crowd of 12,347.

He drove in two runs with a lusty double in the first and two more with his first homer in the third. Both blows came off A's starter Denny McLain and sent the former Cy Young Award winner to the showers. But the best was yet to come and Dave Duncan, still alternating with Gene Tenace behind the plate, started it all in the fourth.

He walked Duane Anderson, hitting for Horlen, to open the inning and then served up a single to Bert Campaneris. Joe Rudi dropped a sacrifice bunt and Kline booted it and that filled the bases and brought on Rich Hinton.

Reggie Jackson grounded wide of first and when Blomberg booted it, Anderson scored Oakland's fourth run of the game and first of the inning. Mike Epstein drilled a single to right for two more runs and when shortstop Gene Michael booted the outfield relay, Epstein raced to second. Fred Beene replaced Hinton and the Yankees walked Mangual intentionally to load the bases and set up a possible double play.

'Scared' Rivals Of Riva Ridge

By JOHN G. GRIFFIN
UPI Sports Editor

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (UPI)— Unlike a year ago, when Canonero II's victory in the Kentucky Derby was regarded as a "fluke" by his victims, Riva Ridge has 'em all scared.

So today there is a strong possibility that not a single one of the 15 other starters in Saturday's 98th running of the Derby will come back to challenge Riva Ridge again when the Meadow Stable star shoots for the second "jewel" in the Triple Crown—the Prekness Stakes.

'GOT TO STUDY'

"I've got to study out the whole Preakness situation," said Homer Pardue, trainer of Derby runner-up No Le Hace, in a statement typical of the Derby losers. "Actually, I think my horse would have a greater shot at him in the Belmont than in the Prekness."

So at the moment the chief challenger to the Derby champion when the Preakness comes up at Pimlico a week from Saturday, May 20, is Key To The Mint—the Derby Trial winner who was deliberately held out of the Derby and pointed for the Preakness.

UPPER CASE

Ignoring a slight bumping at the start, Riva Ridge came flying out of the No. 9 post and took the lead in the first stride.

VAIN TRY

For one mile, Hold Your Peace tried in vain to take it away from him and then that colt, exhausted by the duel, faded to third in the stretch. No Le Hace, who doesn't crank up until late in a race, got rolling from 10 lengths off the pace after six furlongs, easily ran down Hold Your Peace in the stretch to take second, but never got closer than the final margin of 3 1-4 lengths to catching Riva Ridge.

Jockey Ron Turcotte said he "tapped" Riva Ridge just three times with the whip, never really hitting him, and the champion had a lot left as he finished in 2:01 4-5, one and four-fifths seconds over the Derby record for the 1 1-4 mile.

Tars' Arago Sets 3-Mile Record

Mike Arago, College of Marin freshman, set a Camino Norte Conference record in the three-mile Saturday, 14:41.4, in winning that distance race in the conference finals at Marin's field in Kentfield.

Arago, former Tamalpais High School distance star, broke a record of 14:47.0 set last year by Les DeVoe of West Valley Junior College of Campbell.

Scott Covey of De Anza College (Cupertino) also established a new record in the discus with a heave of 154 feet, 7 inches, breaking the old mark of 150 feet, 10 inches. Skyline's (San Bruno) Steve Trueman tied the pole vault record at 14-6.

Marin had 12 athletes place in Saturday's meet, and 10 of them qualified for the Northern California Junior College trials May 17 at Modesto College. Northern California finals are scheduled May 20 at Hartnell College in Salinas.

Ken Blasingame placed in two events for the Tars, third in the 120-yard high hurdles (14.5) and fourth in the 440 intermediate hurdles (57.7). Other Marin athletes qualifying for the NorCal trials, in addition o Arago and Blasingame, are:

Joe Mouille, fifth in the mile (4:26.5); Joe Kinn, sixth in 880, (1.58); Lee Hotchkin, fifth in 3-mile (15:14.4); Jonathan Smith, fifth in long jump (21-5), and the mile relay team of Gary Agee, Tom Estudillo, Bill LaHaye and Bill Baker (3:26.1). Other Marin entrants who placed Saturday but did not qualify for the NorCal trials were Dick Tier-

Giants Cut Down To Size By Phils

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Philadelphia's Steve Carlton cut the San Francisco Giants down to size for the second time Sunday, boosting his record to 5-1 with an 8-3 Phillies' win.

He got a little help from the Giants, though.

Carlton struck out 13 before a crowd of 44,800 and reached the 1000 mark with his sixth strikeout, finishing the game with a career total of 1,007.

Even at that, Carlton's performance was far less impressive than the one-hitter he threw at the Giants in San Francisco, April 25.

Ron Bryant was at the plate when Carlton recorded the 1,000th strikeout.

The Phils wrapped up the game with a four-run third inning off loser Ron Bryant, who was the victim of a costly two-run error by leftfielder Gary Maddox.

Philadelphia loaded the bases in the third when Mike Anderson doubled, Tom Hutton singled and Carlton walked. Larry Bowa's sacrifice fly got Anderson home and Terry Harmon

Boccabella Run Defeats Dodgers

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Terra Linda's John Boccabella is apparently determined to keep his newly won first-string catching assignment with the Montreal Expos.

The 30-year-old right-handed batter singled and scored on an error by Los Angeles Dodger reliever Pete Richert with one out in the 13th inning yesterday, giving the Expos a 1-0 victory.

Following Boccabella's inning-opening single, Ron Hunt singled and Clyde Mashore walked, loading the bases. When Richert bobbled Mike Jorgensen's tap back to the mound, Boccabella scored.

In other games, New York beat San Diego 8-6 in 10 innings; Pittsburgh outslugged Cincinnati, 9-6; St. Louis nipped Atlanta, 5-4; and Houston at Chicago was rained out.

New York, trailing San Diego 6-0, scored five runs in the eighth inning and tied it when Tommie Agee singled in a ninth inning run. Agee then belted a two-run homer with two out in the 10th to win it. John Jeter hit two homers for the losers and Derrel Thomas added a two-run shot.

When Willie Stargell is healthy, the Pittsburgh pitching problems don't seem so severe. The Pirate pitchers gave up six runs, but Stargell hit two homers, including a three-run shot in the seventh, to beat Cincinnati. Stargell is still recovering from knee surgery and manager Bill Virdon says, "he's just getting his fluid swing back."

St. Louis rallied for three runs in the ninth inning to beat Atlanta. Ted Simmons' double and singles by Joe Hague, Ed Crosby and Jose Cruz produced the first two runs. Mike Fiore then batted for winning pitcher Reggie Cleveland and singled off Ron Schueler, the third Atlanta pitcher of the inning, to end the game. Phil Niekro suffered the loss in relief.

Pass Stealers

DETROIT (UPI) — NFL quarterbacks are supposed to "stay in the pocket," hand-off or pass, yet the Lions' Greg Landry's seven yards per carry average was the best in the National League during 1971. Landry ran for 530 yards in 76 ball-carrying attempts and was the Lions' third leading rusher behind Steve Owens and Altie Taylor.

Leonard Sees Tough Series With Nets

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. (UPI) —Coach Bobby Leonard, whose Indiana Pacers have played a pair of route-going best-of-seven series on the way to the present American Basketball Association playoff finals against New York, thinks his team is in for another tough series.

Leonard doesn't speculate that the Pacers-Nets championship meeting might go all seven games, but he added about the Nets, "they're going to make it hard on us. This is going to be a tough series."

But the former Indiana University and National Basketball Association star might have been looking past Indiana's relatively easy 124-103 first-game triumph on the Indiana campus where he starred a couple decades earlier.

The two teams meet here again Tuesday night at the Indiana State Fairgrounds Coliseum —the normal home for Indiana. Games 3 and 4 will be at New York Thursday and May 15 before the fifth contest, if needed, comes back here May 18.

"We got going and everything broke right for us in the second half," Leonard said of the opening game.

Top .167 Hitter: Powell

By U. P. INTERNATIONAL

Boog Powell, who makes his living by driving in runs for the Baltimore Orioles, figures he may be the best .167 hitter in baseball.

Powell has made only eight hits in 48 at bats this season, but they have driven in 13 runs and have helped the three-time American League champions get off to a shaky but respectable 10-7 start in games won and lost.

Powell, who had hit into four double plays in his previous two games, hit two singles, scored two runs and drove in another Sunday when the Orioles beat the Kansas City Royals, 5-4.

"I take pride in my ability to drive in runs and have won two games with my bat this season," said Powell, who drove in one of the Orioles' two runs in the first inning and started a three-run sixth with a single.

The Cleveland Indians defeated the Chicago White Sox, 3-0, the Minnesota Twins beat the Boston Red Sox, 8-4, the Oakland Athletics topped the New York Yankees, 7-5, and the Milwaukee Brewers downed the California Angels, 5-2, in other American League games.

Bruins' Orr Scores 2 In NHL Cup Win

NEW YORK (UPI)—Even his own teammates find it hard to feel sorry for Bobby Orr and his ailing left knee.

Not that they're happy he faces surgery once the season is over, just that, along with everyone else, they can't believe he's really hurting.

"If he's hurt, he's hiding it pretty good," Eddie Johnston laughed Sunday after Orr had made him a winning goaltender by scoring two goals and assisting on another as the Boston Bruins edged the New York Rangers, 3-2. "Bobby turned it on in the first period and opened the game up for us with his two goals."

The victory gave the Bruins a commanding 3-1 advantage in the best-of-seven series and left them with the opportunity of capturing their second Stanley Cup in three years when the series resumes in Boston Tuesday night.

"I feel fine, there are no problems," Orr said of his injury, although he later admitted he felt some pain.

Orr, who had only two goals in Boston's first 12 playoff games this year, doubled that total within a 2:51 span of the first period, then set up what proved to be the winning goal at 16:33 of the second period when he fed Don Marcotte while the Bruins were playing a man short.

Marin 'Cats Blank Drake In Baseball

Jim Petray pitched a four-hit shutout and drove in two runs with a double Saturday night as Marin Catholic High School Wildcats defeated Drake, 4-0, in a baseball game at Albert Park in San Rafael.

Both teams are now tied for fifth place in the Marin County Athletic League with 5-5 records.

The Marin 'Cats scored a run in the second inning on two Drake errors, and clinched the game with a three-run rally in the fourth.

With Paul Riccardi on base via an error, Rich Lopez singled to advance him, Scott Cozza singled for one run, and Petray doubled for two more.

"Steve Sherry made two great fielding plays at shortstop," said the 'Cats coach, Gary Hughes. "He made a backhanded stop and force play at second base to end the game, and in the second inning started a double play by decoying the runner on a little humpback liner over the mound."

DESPITE RAIN

Devlin Leads Houston Golf

HOUSTON (UPI) — Bruce Devlin, who has spent more time in recent years designing and building golf courses than attacking them, carried a two-stroke lead into today's scheduled final round of the rain-delayed, $125,000 Houston Open.

Devlin, a 34-year-old native of Australia, admits he is not a "terribly active player" because of time devoted to his golf course-apartment building architectural firm at Miami.

He plans to pass up the British Open this season for the first time in 10 years.

More than two inches of rain Sunday forced the postponement at the water-soaked, 6,998-yard Westwood Country Club course. The morning tee-off was reset for the noon hour but another downpour erupted, forcing the fourth one-day rain postponement of a Professional Golfers Association tour event this season. No players were on the course when the round was cancelled and there was a 50 per cent chance of rain today.

Devlin was 10 under at 69-70-67—206 and led Hale Irwin by two strokes. Irwin, 26, of Boulder, Colo., dropped a three-stroke lead Saturday and was hampered by erratic winds in finishing with a 67-67-74—208. He was trailed by Doug Sanders, Jack Ewing and Chuck Thorpe at seven-under 209, three strokes off the pace.

Devlin, whose 4-year-old son had minor surgery scheduled today at Houston, has won six tour titles since joining the circuit in 1962 and was among the $100,000 winners in 1970.

"I haven't been playing a lot because I am spending a lot of my time building golf courses and apartments," the 6-1, 158-pound Devlin said. "I am not practicing when I am off the tour and my game has suffered a bit. I decided a couple of months ago to play a little more."

Devlin's best finish this year was a fifth-place tie at the Masters and he is 39th in 1972 earnings with $19,721.

"I don't know from one month to the next what I will do," he said. "I do not plan to go to the Brisish Open unless I win the U.S. Open. I probably played in 10 tournaments this year and played four or five weeks in a row in the winter, the longest stretch of playing I have had on the tour in five years.

"So you wouldn't call me a terribly active player."

McLaren, Gurney In Indy Pole Battle

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. (UPI) —The battle for the pole position for the 1972 Indianapolis 500-mile race began to shape up today as a tail-to-nose struggle between the American-built Eagles of Dan Gurney and the English-designed McLarens bearing the name of the late Bruce McLaren.

The search for speed continued Sunday and it was the McLarens which appeared to take over control of the fast testing in practice for the May 27 Indianapolis "500." There's just five days left before the start of time trials Saturday.

Gary Bettenhausen, Tinley Park, Ill., became the first man ever to drive 190 miles per hour during an official practice session for the speedway classic with an unofficial 190.315 m.p.h. He was chauffeuring a Roger Penske prepared McLaren. Peter Revson, Redondo Beach, Calif., last year's pole setter and track record holder, roared to his fastest practice time of 188.324 m.p.h. in his team McLaren.

Behind the English-built cars came a pair of Eagles driven by Mike Mosly, Clermont, Ind., and Jim Malloy, Denver. But the Eagles and Gurney's top driver, Bobby Unser, Albuquerque, N.M. has not been on the track since early last week and after that circuit, Unser's Offenhauser engine was dismantled and sent back to Gurney's shops at Santa Ana, for overhaul.

Mosley Sunday hit a 185.874 m.p.h. lap and Malloy had a 185.071. Malloy had quick time in five of the first nine days in his 1972 Eagle, including an 188.048 m.p.h. on Friday.

Three-time Indianapolis winner A.J. Foyt Jr., Houston, Tex., posted fifth quick speed Sunday at 184.949—his quickest this year in his own 1972 Coyote.

There have been 11 cars top 180 m.p.h. so far this year and Revson's records are 179.354 for one lap and 178.696 for the fourlap average.

Sunday's quick runners—Bettenhausen, Revson and Malloy—lead the pack. Bill Vukovich, Fresno, Calif., follows next with 186.567, then Mosley; Al Unser, Albuquerque, N.M., 185.338; Gordon Johncock, Mt. Pleasant, Mich., 184.653; Foyt; Johnny Rutherford, Fort Worth, Tex., 183.748; Bobby Unser, 183.299; and Mark Donohue, Newton Square, Pa., 180.650.

INTENSE ATMOSPHERE

Bruins-Rangers NHL Cup Game Was 'For Blood'

By MILTON RICHMAN

NEW YORK (UPI)—This one was for blood.

You could tell that right away from the electrically charged atmosphere, the same kind you'll find a minute or so before the start of most gang rumbles.

Down on the ice, the Boston Bruins were skating in those perfect little concentric circles hockey players always do before a game and up in the top row of the gallery at Madison Square Garden Sunday one of the special cops was beet red in the face and looking as if he was going to have apoplexy.

FANS HOLLER

"Get that damn thing down!" he hollered to two young fans who were hanging a banner over the side.

The banner came down.

To give you an idea of how lurid its message was, two other banners which said, "Sanderson, you fruit" and "McKenzie is a pig" were allowed to be displayed.

If this game meant anything special to either team, either the Bruins or the New York Rangers, which it certainly did, one person skating down there on the ice gave no clue of that.

BOBBY ORR

Bobby Orr looked for all the world as if he merely were out for a pleasant Sunday afternoon turn on the ice.

But the moment the game began you knew different.

Bobby Orr, the foremost hockey player in the game today by far, flipped the puck past Ranger goalie Eddie Giacomin 5:26 after the opening faceoff and for the benefit of anybody who might've missed that he came right back and did it again less than three minutes later.

That put the Bruins two goals up. Near the end of the second period he laid a beautiful pass on Don Marcotte's stick and the Boston forward banged home Boston's third goal.

BRUINS

When it was all over and the Bruins had beaten the Rangers, 3-2, to take three games to one lead in the Stanley Cup playoffs and practically wrap it up, somebody asked Derek Sanderson his feelings about Bobby Orr.

Derek Sanderson probably is hockey's most colorful performer. He wears his hair long and a moustache to go with it and sometimes he offers flip answers to questions. Not this time though.

"If he would quit tomorrow," Derek Sanderson said about Bobby Orr, "he would go down in history. The kid is beyond being fantastic. He always goes; he always responds, but the key thing about him is the way he reacts to pressure. The bigger the game, the more he responds. When no one else is playing, he plays. He can score a lot more goals than he does, but that isn't important to him. If we're dragging out there, he'll ignite us and then go back and placy defense. We have a few names for him. We call him "'Jesus Christ,' 'God' and 'Moses.' It embarrasses him when he hears things like that. All he does is shake his head."

SUPERSTAR

Bobby Orr, at 24, already has established himself as hockey's premier superstar. There are some who claim he's the finest player who ever laced on a pair of skates.

On the ice he's always in the right place at the right time. He's the kind of player who can put the puck into the net anytime he feels like, and if he can't, he certainly gives you that impression.

No matter how big the crisis Grr is involved in, he's invariably so cool, so calm, so completely collected. Even during a brief first period fight with Ranger defenseman Brad Park Sunday he never really breathed hard or mussed his hair.

"Fight?" he brushed off the episode later. "I don't care to fight. It just takes too much outta you. Especially in a game like this."

COMPARISON

Somebody asked him how he would compare this performance of his with some of his other good ones.

"This was our best game of the playoffs," he replied, purposely misinterpreting the question. That's the way Bobby Orr is. He prefers talking about the team, not himself.

"I'm talking about your performance, not the team's," his questioner persisted.

"I'm very happy," Orr said, letting it go at that.

Pinned up against the wall in the locker room by a legion of newsmen, Bobby Orr fibbed a little. He said he felt fine and nothing hurt him when all the time his left knee was throbbing so much that Don Canney, the Bruins' trainer, had to come over and tape it.

Sitting down on the bench because he was being hemmed in by questioners, Orr accidentally spilled a soft drink behind him and quickly jumped up off the bench.

"Damn, I hope it didn't get you," he said to Ted Green, the Bruins' veteran defenseman sitting alongside him. "You didn't get wet, did you?"

Ted Green said he hadn't.

Later, after Orr had moved to another part of the room to have his knee taped, Green said the concern Orr had shown was typical of him.

"He's one of the greatest hockey players I've ever seen," said Ted Green. "I mean on and off the ice."

EX-WHITE SOX PITCHER

Horlen's Pride, Playing Status Returned On A's

By JOE SARGIS

OAKLAND (UPI) —Now that his pride has been restored, Joe Horlen is willing to forgive and forget.

It was only three weeks ago to the day that Horlen was told by the Chicago White Sox that every club in the major leagues had waived on him and that he was free to see if he could find himself a job.

"I couldn't believe it," Horlen said, recalling the day. "It just didn't seem real to me that no one was willing to take a chance on me. Be that as it may, about the only thing that bothers me now is the reasons I was given for being released."

Horlen, who since has signed on with the Oakland A's and for what he called a fair and generous contract, said the one thing he'd like everyone to know is that he isn't mad at White Sox manager Chuck Tanner.

"Someone else (Stu Holcomb) did the dirty work and poor Chuck was left to hand me the bad news," said Horlen, a veteran of 10 big league seasons with the White Sox. "I know how bad Tanner felt about having to tell me but I also knew he wasn't the man who made the decision."

Horlen, who has a .500 record in the majors with 113 victories and the same number of losses, didn't have to go far to get a job once the White Sox let him go.

"Mr. (Charlie) Finley was the first man I called," Horlen said. "And he didn't hesitate for a second. He told me to join the club and prove I still could pitch.

Pearson Triumphs In Winston Race

By U. P. INTERNATIONAL

TALLADEGA, Ala. — David Pearson of Spartanburg, S.C., who won$c35,5$left $23,745 with his first-place finish yesterday in the second annual Winston 500 stock car race, said he took the lead only when it was necessary.

Pearson, driving the Mercury that carried A. J. Foyt to victory lanes twice earlier this season, took the checkered flag only three seconds ahead of pole sitter Bobby Isaac after the Catawba, N.C., native, who ran the final five laps of the race under a black flag, was forced into the wall on the final turn.

Isaac was awarded second place, but was fined $1,500 for ignoring the black flag that was posted on the 183rd lap when officials determined that his gas cap had been left off with about 40 miles to go in the race.

Racing

FRANCORCHAMPS, Belgium — Belgium's Jacky Ickx appeared headed for a comfortable victory in the Spa-Francorchamps 1,000-kilometer sports car race yesterday when a puncture on the 14-kilometer (8.7 miles) circuit cost him and teammate Clay Regazzoni of Switzerland victory and let England's Brian Redman and Italy's Arturo Merzario score their first win of the season.

Tennis

Sweden, Denmark, France and Czechoslovakia advanced yesterday to the quarter-finals of the European Zone Davis Cup tennis competition. Sweden defeated New Zealand, 4-1; Denmark edged Finland, 3-2; France overwhelmed Great Britain, 4-1; and Czechoslovakia ousted Belgium, 3-2.

LAS VEGAS, Nev. — A strained stomach muscle failed to daunt John Newcombe of Australia in the final round of the Caesar's Palace World Championship tennis tournament yesterday as he scored an easy 6-3, 6-4 victory over South Africa's Cliff Drysdale to draw down a winner's purse of $10,000 in the $50,000 event.

Golf

SHREVEPORT, La. — Don Iverson, with four consecutive 69s, won the $25,000 Shreveport Classic golf tournament with an eight-under-par 276 total yesterday.

LAS VEGAS, Nev. — Long-hitting Betty Burfeindt, a relative unknown on the ladies Professional Golfer's Association tour until a few weeks ago, led all the way in the 72-hole Sealy Classic tournament to finish with a 10-under par 282 that was worth $10,000 and a $6,000 automobile in prizes.

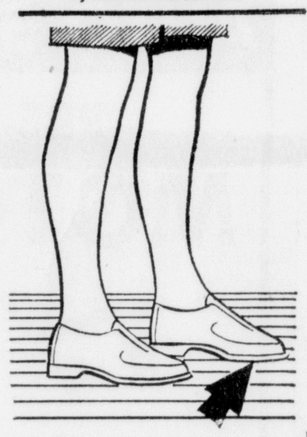
Baseball

PITTSBURGH — Pittsburgh Pirates pitcher Dock Ellis, reading a statement drafted by attorney Thomas Reich, yesterday gave his version of his encounter last Friday with a security guard at Riverfront Stadium in Cincinnati, claiming the guard pulled his gun three times from its holster and pointed it at Ellis.

Later, the guard sprayed Ellis with chemical mace. Reich denied that Ellis threatened the guard with a wine bottle, a charge for which Ellis faces a hearing July 10 in Cincinnati.

BOWLING TIPS

By MARION LADEWIG



Little changed in the address position can often spell big differences in pin-counts. I've found that most four-step bowlers find it easier to go into a smooth approach if they will psoition the left foot slightly ahead at address. The left foot is the one that first accepts weight as the approach is begun, and if it's already out there a bit the move becomes easier.

Hobbits Habit Helped By Heisler's Hitting

Al Heisler rapped four hits in four times at bat, including a two-run home run, and drove in five runs as Hobbits Habit defeated Fleur de France, 14-2, in a San Rafael Parks and Recreation Department adult softball league game last night at Albert Park.

In other action, McKee's defeated Marin District, 10-7; Clobber, Inc., crowned King Realty, 12-5; Pizza Palace defeated Mudville Nine, 12-1; and Joe America edged Charlie Brown, 5-4.

San Rafael Firm Posts Earnings

SAN RAFAEL (BW) — Capital Funding Corp. of San Rafael reported a net income for the first quarter of 1972 of $30,938, or two cents per share.

President Frank J. Mc Cormack said this compares with a loss in the first quarter of 1971 of $229,475, or 16 cents per share.

The company's life insurance subsidiary, American Pacific Life Insurance Co. of California, made the largest contribution ($93,595) to the earnings of Capital Funding Corporation.

All of the consolidated operating subsidiaries of Capital Funding Corp. reported profits for the first quarter as follows:

Dahlman & Co. Inc., $84,010; Capital Securities Co., $44,949; Capital Funding Securities Co., $2,788; and Capital Funding Realty Corp., $5,125.

The parent company, Capital Funding Corp., did not show a profit for the quarter primarily because of the reorganization of its life insurance sales into its subsidiary American Pacific Life, McCormack explained.

SUCCESSFUL INVESTING

Coca-Cola's Capped 13 Good Years, Hold It

By ROGER E. SPEAR

Q. We have inherited a good amount of Coca-Cola Co. stock. Should it be held? We know knothing about the stock market. — S.P.

A. Coca-Cola (NYSE) recently put the cap on its 13th consecutive year of rising sales and earnings as results for 1971 reached a record $2.82 a share on net sales of $1.73 billion. Sparking this impressive track record is significant growth overseas (company obtains about half of its net from foreign operations, although only 40 per cent of sales), plus improved domestic consumer demand. Margins for the firm's noncola beverages are being widened, while the disposal of low-margin canning operations has also enlarged the rate of return. Augmenting domestic sales have been acquisitions, the latest being Aqua-Chem, a water purification firm. The latter, which has substantial potential, should pick up this year after a sluggish 1971.

Coca-Cola (which appears to be a split candidate) is amply priced on near-term prospects, but is an attractive commitment for the long-term investor. Hold.

Q. Having sold my home, I now have $15,000 to invest in a stock paying 5 per cent or 6 per cent, safe and with good growth potential. What would you recommend? — A.M.

A. American Brands (NYSE) is a sound investment offering adequate income (5.2 percent) and long-term appreciation potential. The firm has been broadening and expanding its sales base through acquisitions in recent years. And although, American Brands derives the major portion of revenues from tobacco products, sales of nontobacco items, such as distilled beverages, food and hardware, have risen 268 per cent since 1966. The most recent acquisition proposal involves Shatterproof Glass Co. which, if pruchased, would add more than $38 million to total annual revenue, boosting nontobacco revenue to more than $800 million a year.

1972 should be American Brands' 9th consecutive year of uninterrupted sales and earnings growth with profits per share projected in the $4.50 area, 5 per cent more than 1971's $4.30 a share. Buy for income and growth.

Quarter Earnings

Farmers Group, Inc. earned $4,990,700 or 59 cents per share for the first quarter of 1972, compared to $3,928,700 or 48 cents per share for the first quarter of 1971, John C. Tyler and Thomas E. Leavey, co-chairmen of the board, has announced.

A Broad Retreat On Market

NEW YORK (UPI)—Prices on the New York Stock Exchange retreated on a broad front today in the face of uncertainties in Vietnam and whatever new action the United States plans to take there.

Shortly before the market closed the White House announced President Nixon will make a nationwide televised talk tonight on the situation in the war-torn country.

Declines far outnumbered advances, 962 to 435, among the 1,724 issues traded in one of the lowest trading days of the year.

Prices also were lower on the American Stock Exchange. Trading was moderate.

Auto stocks were weak for much of the session. American Motors, consistently on the active list recently after announcing first quarter profits compared to first quarter losses last year, was down 1-4 at one point.

General Motors moved in an out of the plus column. It announced it was recalling about 350,000 of its 1971 and 1972 Chevrolet Vegas because of suspected throttle defects.

SAN FRANCISCO (BW) — Arthur W. Swanson has been named to the newly created position of corporate credit manager on the staff of Foremost-McKesson Inc. of San Francisco. San Rafael Candle Maker Is Expanding Its Operations

General Housewares-Giftwares Group, San Rafael manufacturer and wholesaler of candles and giftware, is expanding its production and warehouse space to triple its present size.

Operating out of 15 Lovell Avenue, the company has leased the 80,000-square-foot building formerly occupied by Bergman Manufacturing at 632 Irwin Street. A modified second floor is being added to provide a total floor area of about 120,000 square feet, more than two and one-half acres.

Philip Dallow, president of the west coast operations of Giftwares Group, said the company is consolidating all warehousing into the Irwin Street building and using the Lovell Street site for production and management.

Under the current expansion plan, the company will have almost 100 fulltime employees, with seasonal increases to 200, instead of the normal 50 to 125 employees.

Last fall, General Housewares-Giftwares Group bought Colonial Sales and Manufacturing from York Westgate Sr. of San Rafael and became wholesale distributors of these three lines:

Carousel Candles, Holt Howard (giftware, ceramics, and candle accessories), and Colonial Candles of Cape Cod.

"We are now offering Carousel candles nationwide and are going into the discount stores for the first time," said Dallow. Cape Cod candles are distributed through non-discount stores and chains.

The building at 124-128 Throckmorton is owned by Bam-Law, represented by attorney Lawrence A. Mayer. Pacific Telephone, which has a lease on the building until February of 1974, is looking for a new site so that Fidelity can move in.

McVAY AGENCY, a new personnel placement firm, opened this week in Robert H. Greene's new building at 818 Fifth Avenue, San Rafael. This will be temporary quarters until permanent space is available next door at 810 Fifth Avenue.

Owner-manager Patricia McVay said the agency will offer placements to men and women in the commercial, medical, legal and accounting fields.

Mrs. McVay has 18 years' experience in personnel counseling, 10 of which were with Western Personnel in San Francisco. She was also with Mount Zion Hospital and Bay Medical Associates in San Francisco, and most recently with Northgate Personnel in Northgate Industrial Park, San Rafael.

Owner Harold Wolfson of Sausalito opened the Marin store at 236 Town and Country Village, former home of The Carousel. The store has been completely remodeled. Store manager is Lois Langston.

James Sears' main store has been operating in Vallejo for 16 years. Wolfson bought it last year and has opened two branches since then — a new one in San Jose's Town and Country Village last month and the one at Strawberry.

The store carries all categories of women's fashion except lingerie. It is a medium to better priced store catering to juniors and young matrons.

REALTORS — The Rev. Samuel Banks of Marin City will speak at the breakfast meeting tomorrow of the Marin County Board of Realtors. He will discuss: "Is There a Place for Low-cost Housing in Marin?" The meeting starts at 8 a.m. in the Corte Madera Recreation Center.

THE TUNE-UP SHOP, which will open at 41 Belvedere Street in San Rafael, is the new name of an old established firm, Rupp's Performance Center, which has been at 121 Jacoby Street for five years.

Owner Karl Sandholdt is in the process of moving into the new building at 41 Belvedere Street, which he described as a "much more efficient layout." He will specialize in high quality tune-up and electrical work catering more toward the average car owner than the hot-rod driver.

The Tune-Up Shop will be open five days a week from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Miss Crane has free-lanced for Time, Pageant, Sign, Photoplay, Ramparts, and the former Look Magazine. She has covered a variety of subjects from Hell's Angels to nudes for Playboy.

Stern, a San Francisco photographer, combines his photos on unusual wood mountings that make unique wall decorations.

NOVATO REALTY, a new corporation formed by Louis J. Giovine and Gordon K. Morse, is building an air-conditioned administrative-professional building at 1120 Grant Avenue, corner of Second Street.

The realty company, now at 1620 Grant Avenue, will move into the new building in August. The law firm of Trumbull and Rush, now at 1620 Grant, will also move into the new Novato Realty building.

Giovine said he has about 900 square feet of space still available for long term lease in his new building.
